The Biggest Magnet.
Some Best People.
Oxygen Baptism.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

THE French government builds a gigantic magnet several thousand times as powerful as any built thus far.

It will be used in scientific experiments in connection with the molecular and atomic construction of matter, etc. The magnet eventually will be of great use in industry.

HERE the steel companies use magnets picking up tons of steel rails and loading them on cars, dropping them down, lifting them up, as a boy lifts tacks with his toy magnet.

MAN is an intelligent animal, living on a gigantic combination power wheel and magnet, the earth. He constructs his own little power plant, builds his own electric and magnetic power.

In the North, day before yesterday, man's electric work felt an electric storm, and an amazing aurora borealis, stretching all across the northern part of the continent.

If men could borrow and use the inexhaustible electric power of the earth, they would not need to turn coal or water falls into electric current.

NEW YORK'S reform committee calls night clubs vice dens. Miss Texas Guinan, who owns THE night club, denies it. "Every night their mothers call for the kids in my place," says she. The kids are young ladies that entertain the young gentlemen. She adds, "I have thrown out some of the best people in New York just because they forgot themselves. I stop the music, and out they go."

FUTURE writers of history will try to imagine those "best people in New York" thrown out for forgetting themselves, and wonder what the WORST people in New York must have been.

THE great new German Zeppelin, soon to make its trip around the world, was appropriately baptized with liquid oxygen, the element most important to fliers. The music, well chosen, was Beethoven's choral, "The Heavens Proclaim the Glory of God."

The heavens also proclaim the lesser glory of men, filling the sky with flying machines.

Man made in God's image really begins to amount to something.

IN the Nankow Pass, 20,000 Chinese soldiers died. To comfort them, dignitaries traveled to the spot where they fell and 3,000 soldiers stood at attention while a very nice letter was read to the 20,000 dead men. China doesn't believe in our Heaven, but does believe that the dead, in some mysterious way, know what is going on.

THE Pullman porters say they will strike for $150 a month and "abolition of all tips."

The bigger salary is a good idea, if they can get it. Abolition of tips would be extremely foolish, and ruin the service, taking away incentive.

At present, every Pullman car porter is "in business for himself." And that means doing your business well, with your heart in it.

THE death of Alfred Loewenstein, Belgian of many millions, becomes more puzzling. He drew out $500,000 cash before the flight that ended with his disappearance. A seaman tells of seeing a parachute coming down, and police tell of a mysterious man landing at a London dock the night of the disappearance.

The probability is that Loewenstein, worried and irresponsible, jumped to death. If he did, it will never be proved, and the law may tie his estate up for 30 years.

RUSSIA worries about Japan's desires to absorb Manchuria, to be used for Japan's overflow population. That does not worry the United States.

Asia belongs to Asiatics, and Japan's spread in Asia would have our blessing. It would mean eventually the building up of a gigantic Asiatic power, but it is our business to build a greater, stronger power here.

SOME very important Americans, neatly divorced in Paris, are worrying. The rich were amazed to find how easily a divorce could be produced in France.

Now they find that money is useful there as well as here. One judge and various court officials are accused, and 142 prosperous Americans divorced by that one judge, many of them remarried, may find complication in their lives.

5TH AVENUE SAFE LOOTED

After Cracksmen Looted Safes

PHOTOS BY THE SUN-TELEGRAPH.

TWO SAFES DRILLED

Professional safe-crackers made a haul today when they looted two safes in Turners' Building and Loan Association, second floor, 625 Fifth avenue. An acetylene torch was used to burn off combinations. The loot was $2,000. Dorothy Levenson, stenographer, looks over the work of the yeggs. To enter, the thieves drilled a door panel of the Keystone Wall Paper Company, first floor, where a small amount of cash was taken. Association loss is covered by insurance.

BURN WAY TO $2,500, THEN FLEE

Professional cracksmen looted the safe of the Turners Building and Loan Association, second floor of 625 Fifth avenue, of more than $2,500 early today.

On the first floor the yeggs broke open a cash register of the Keystone Wall Paper Company and took a small sum.

The robbers gained entrance through a rear window, city detectives said. With an acetylene torch they burned off the combination knob of the safe, a slow process, gaining access to the strong box.

A large number of checks which the yeggs evidently discarded, were found strewn on the floor by employes of the loan association when they entered the office this morning.

Detectives sought to obtain fingerprints around the window through which the robbers entered the building, but no marks were found, the cracksmen evidently having used gloves.

Because of the methods employed, the detectives pronounced the robbery the work of professional cracksmen.

The officers of the building and loan association announced that the losses of the organization are fully covered by insurance.

3 MISSING FOUND AFLOAT ON ICE

International News Service.

MOSCOW, July 11.—Three members of the crew of the wrecked dirigible Italia, missing since they set out alone on foot to seek land, have been located by a Russian aviator, according to a radio message today from the Russian icebreaker Krassin.

Aviator Chuchnovsky, who hopped off near the Krassin in a seaplane, reported that the group were floating helpless on an ice floe in 80.4 latitude and 25.45 west longitude. The floe was surrounded by masses of crushed ice.

WAVE FLAGS

Chuchnovsky circled over the party five times making observations. Two members of the party waved flags, but the third was lying down upon the ice motionless and apparently dead.

Heavy mists developed compelled the aviator to land upon Northeast Land.

The commander of the Krassin reported that he is attempting to rescue the group, but that the passage to the floe is blocked by hugh icebergs.

The Krassin has been operating among the ice floes in the vicinity of Northeast Land in an effort to rescue the group of survivors headed by Viglieri.

The group now reported located is understood to be composed of Dr. Finn Malmgren, Capt. Alberto Mariano and Capt. Fillipo Zappi. For the last two weeks they have been given up for lost.

The Malmgren party was floating on the ice when located.

It was expected here that an effort would be made by the commander of the Krassin to approach the place where the three men were found, and to take them aboard the steamer. If this is not possible, one of the Russian aviators with the Krassin will probably attempt a landing on the ice floes to rescue the men.

Smith Heads?

CAMPAIGN

John J. Raskob, chairman, finance committee, General Motors, appears Gov. Alfred E. Smith's first choice as national presidential campaign director and Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former Wyoming governor, national Democratic vice chairman, a post now vacant.

J. J. RASKOB CHAIRMAN OF DEMS

By GEORGE R. HOLMES.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith assumed control of the Democratic party today. He selected John J. Raskob, chairman of the finance committee of the gigantic General Motors corporation, to conduct his campaign for the presidency.

The Democratic National Committee placidly ratified his choice a few hours later by electing Raskob chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Along with Raskob's selection Herbert H. Lehmann, another personal friend of the nominee, became director of finance, succeeding Jesse H. Jones, of Texas.

Five vice chairmen of the National Committee were named. They are:

Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former Governor of Wyoming; Frank Hague, Mayor of Jersey City; Gov. Harry Byrd, of Virginia, brother of Commander Richard E. Byrd, the trans-Atlantic and North Pole flier; Scott Ferris, National Committeeman from Oklahoma, and Mrs. Florence Farley, of Kansas.

James W. Gerard, of New York former ambassador to Germany was re-elected treasurer, and Charles A. Greathouse, of Indiana was re-elected secretary.

The selection of Raskob as national chairman brings to the leadership of the Smith campaign one of the most influential business and industrial leaders in the country.

It is accounted a shrewd move to impress the great business interests of the country that they have nothing to fear from a change of administration and to destroy the effects of such statements as Secretary of the Treasury Mellon made a few days ago that "business will again support the Republican ticket."

The selection of Raskob was entirely a personal one with Gov. Smith. Raskob is known to but few members of the national committee, and is wholly unknown to the rank and file generally.

Gov. Smith and his chairman however, have been warm personal friends for years.

M'KECHNIE GRABS SMITH FOR CARDS; MILJUS GLAD HE'S SOLD

Johnny Welcomes Release to Cleveland —Hints at Veiled Motive

By Johnny Miljus

I'm tickled to death to leave.

Donie Bush treated me all right. I have nothing against Dreyfuss. And the boys on the club—they're the greatest boys I ever played with. There's not a clique on that club.

Dreyfuss treated me O. K. But I don't understand why I've been sold. There's something wrong somewhere.

Dreyfuss and Bush both told me they were sorry to see me leave. However, they couldn't have sent me to a better place. I like Cleveland and Peckinpaugh.

I haven't been able to get started this year. In the spring I pitched in cold weather in exhibition games—Dallas, San Antonio, Memphis. And then when the season started I worked one game in Chicago in snow.

Anyhow, I was sick this spring—a touch of the flu and an infection

Firing Smith May Net Him Series Cut

Did the Pirates "fire" Catcher Earl Smith into a $5,000 or $6,000 "cut" of the world series pie when they gave him his release Monday?

Going from the sixth place Pirates to the first-place Cardinals is not such a bad move for the veteran. The Cardinals appear to be the best bet to win the National League pennant, and a winning or losing player's share of the world series spoils is not to be sneezed at.

Cardinals May Profit By Snatching Up Castoff Catcher of Pirates.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Earl (Oil) Smith, veteran catcher dropped by the Pirates on Monday, has been picked up by the St. Louis Cardinals. He has accepted terms and will report as soon as possible and sign a contract.

Bill McKechnie, of Wilkinsburg, manager of the Cardinals and a deposed manager of the Pirates, who is making a great bid to win the National League pennant, was the man who snatched up Smith. Once before, some five years ago, he saved Smith from going to the minors when the Boston Braves asked waivers on the aggressive receiver, and he got a lot of good work out of Earl as a Pirate.

This year, Bill has only Jimmy Wilson as a reliable catcher, since he let Bob O'Farrell go to the New York Giants. The addition of a man of Smith's experience to help out Wilson behind the bat in the heated stages of the flag race may prove a great factor in deciding the struggle.

Smith is in town winding up his affairs. He may leave for St. Louis tonight. Pitcher John Miljus, who was sold to the Cleveland Americans yesterday, as the second move in the Bucs' housecleaning campaign, will report to Manager Roger Peckinpaugh, of the Indians, at Washington tomorrow.

At St. Louis, Rabbit Maranville, another Pirate castoff, is playing a great game at shortstop for the Cardinals. Will Smith, along with the Rabbit and Manager McKechnie, give the Cardinals a pennant winner? Stranger things have happened.

Smith Lead 4,000

Hoover was favorite yesterday on two of the machines used in The Sun-Telegraph's straw vote on the presidential election, the one in the P. & L. E. Railroad Station showing 43 for the Republican candidate and 35 for the Democratic candidate while in Wilkinsburg the tally was 83 to 25 for Hoover.

The total vote has now run well over 25,000 with Smith exactly 4,000 ahead of his opponent. Most of this balloting represents the downtown section of Pittsburgh. Reports from the suburban districts show an indication of Hoover preference for president.

The City-County Building turned in the largest vote yesterday, 222 for Smith and 151 for Hoover. This is not quite such an odd in the Democratic candidate's favor as has been reported from this building in previous counts, but it is still a wide margin.

A 12-mile-an-hour breeze from the Southwest tempered the heat somewhat today.

SUMMER SPURT BOOMS BUSINESS HERE

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

Signs of a distinct revival in the activity of Pittsburgh business have become apparent for the first time in several months. Steel, oil and coal are all feeling the stimulus of new developments.

Steel, the city's basic industry, is expected to show improvement in both production and prices. The unfilled tonnage report of the United States Steel Corporation, made yesterday, has shown the first increase since early in the year. This will be reflected in actual specifications for shipment during the next three months. And at the same time a 10,300,000-barrel oil contract was awarded a Pittsburgh company.

Unfilled steel orders on June 30 totaled 3,637,009 tons, which was an increase of 220,187 tons during the month. Decreases of 62,983 tons in March, 463,073 tons in April and 455,311 tons in May had been reported, a drop of 981,367 tons for the three months.

EXCEEDS JUNE, 1927

The total 6,637,009 tons at the end of June also was an increase of 585,763 tons over unfilled orders for June, 1927.

By far the greater part of the increase in orders was booked during the final days of the month. A few weeks ago the United States Steel Corporation and the independent producers announced advances of $1 a ton in the prices of bars, plates and shapes, the three leading items of steel production. The rush of buying largely represented an effort on the part of consumers to take advantage of the old prices.

The margin of profit of steel companies has been steadily expanded this year. Present quotations on bars, plates and shapes are $3 a ton higher than last fall. It will be some time before the last increase will actually become effective on deliveries, but the trend is steadily upward.

USUALLY DULL PERIOD

The increase in tonnage comes at a time of the year which normally is inactive, and for that reason it is looked upon as an especially favorable sign.

The volume of demand thus far this month is said to indicate a possible further gain in unfilled orders for July, owing to the satisfactory rate of demand from automobile makers, who have started production of their new models. The building industry and manufacturers of agricultural implements are also taking large tonnage of steel.

The tin plate industry is working at over 90 per cent of capacity in anticipation of large packs of fruits and vegetables. Makers of pipe, who have been suffering from lack of demand from oil producers, have booked 225,000 tons of heavy line pipe for oil lines in the last two weeks.

COAL PRICES UP

The coal business is still far from satisfactory, but slightly better prices are being realized. The opinion is quite general in the coal trade that the latter part of August will see stronger prices, when domestic demand becomes a factor and when consumers will have had an opportunity to use stocks of coal on hand. The Pittsburgh Coal Company mined 740,293 tons in this district in June, the greatest tonnage for any June in the last five years.

One local company which has secured a large contract which will be of benefit over a long period is the Gulf Refining Company, a subsidiary of the Gulf Oil Corporation. The Shipping Board has accepted this company's bid to supply 10,300,000 barrels of bunker oil per year for the Merchant Fleet Corporation at the ports of New York, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Galveston and Port Arthur for the three-year period commencing January 1, 1929.

Local oil producers generally are being helped by the advances of 10 cents to 15 cents a barrel in the prices of Pennsylvania crude oil announced Monday.

Freed, Years Paid for Another

INNOCENT PRISONER LET OUT

JACKSON, Mich., July 11.—Yesterday a prison inmate with many years to serve—today a free man, anxious to get another foothold on life, despite his gray hairs and 47 years.

Thus has fate dealt with Fred C. Smith, freed by a Circuit Court jury of nine women and three men, who decided Smith is not James C. Wilson, sentenced to serve 20 years in the local prison on a charge of robbery. He was received here in January, 1907.

Smith alleges that he has been confined in the Michigan institution for the past six years and has been denied during that time the right to seek his release until the past year.

"I was returned to Jackson prison from Pittsburgh, where I had been serving a term on orders of former Warden Harry Hulburt," Smith said.

"They placed me in solitary confinement when I came here six years ago. After several misunderstandings I was removed to a dungeon beneath the ground, with absolutely no light, and upon my refusal to eat stale bread and water I went foodless for 16 days. On several occasions I was fed through a tube by the prison physician."

The man was released from the dungeon on May 19, 1923, he declared, and was then taken to the State Hospital at Ionia, and on July 16 was returned to Jackson.

CONVICTED HERE

Warden Stanley P. Ashe, of the Western Penitentiary, said his records showed that Fred C. Smith, alias John Jones, alias William Wilson, was convicted in the Quarter Sessions Court of Allegheny county of entering 10 dwellings and stealing cash, watches, diamonds and other jewelry to the value of several hundred dollars. The burglaries were committed between January 25, 1912, and February 15, 1912, and Smith was sentenced by Judge Robert S. Frazer, now of the State Supreme Court, to serve from 10 to 16 years in the penitentiary.

Smith was transferred from the Western Penitentiary to the asylum for the criminal insane at Farview, was discharged from there as cured and turned over to the Jackson Penitentiary authorities on December 9, 1922.

MINER CHIEFS MEET ON DROPPING SCALE

INDIANAPOLIS, July 11.—(AP.)—Decision whether changed conditions in the bituminous coal fields necessitate modification of the Jacksonville wage scale confronted the meeting of the policy committee of the organization today.

Harry Fishwick, Illinois district president, announced that the situation in the Southern Illinois union fields, where the miners seek freedom to negotiate separate agreements with the coal operators, would be placed before the committee for discussion. He denied, however, that any formal request for recession from the union stand would be made.

The policy committee, having full control of the strike policies of the union between the bi-annual international conventions, is composed of representatives from all districts of the United Mine Workers, members of the international executive board and the executive officers of the organization.

The meeting was called last week by John L. Lewis, international president, "for the purpose of reviewing the strike situation in various bituminous coal fields."

The executive board had a two-hour session yesterday, but Lewis refused to divulge what action was taken. The members of the board were to resume their sessions following the policy committee meeting today.

in the neck. But that's all the breaks in baseball.

I'm mighty sorry to leave all my Pittsburgh friends.

What has been the matter with the Pirates? Why was Earl Smith fired? Why was Johnny Miljus sold to Cleveland? What truth is there in tales that many Pirates are bruising the rules and coming up with the dawn? Is there dissension in the club?

These were some of the questions that bothered Pirate fans today. And, for the most part, they went unanswered. Above is what Johnny Miljus, hero of 1927, told The Sun-Telegraph.

OUT FOR FIVE IN A ROW

The Pirates today were out to land a fifth straight victory. There was a brilliant touch to the play of the Oaklanders yesterday as they came from behind in the ninth inning to snatch victory right out of the grasp of the Phillies.

The clash this afternoon with the Phillies will see the Pirates reaching the half-way mark in the National League sweepstakes. While it is true that the team has been a big disappointment in the first half of the race, there was a feeling among the players that the second part of the competition would be more pleasant.

The second half of the race appears to hold an easier schedule for the Oaklanders, as there are many games remaining unplayed with the comparatively easy clubs of the East.

The second game of the present series is expected to bring a battle of righthanders. Ervin Brame, who tamed the Giants Saturday, will work for the Pirates. Ray Benge, one of Shotton's best sharpshooters, is due for the Phils.

THREE FOUND ON ICE

teorologist, which previously had been referred to as the walking party, had been missing and practically given up for lost ever since May 30 when they left the nine men of the Nobile group who had been thrown from the ice when the Italia's gondola was smashed on May 25.

With Dr. Malmgren were Capt. Alberto Mariano, pilot of the Italia, and Capt. Filippo Zappi, Italian navy navigator.

These men stayed five days with the marooned party off Northeast Land and then decided to make an effort to reach land and then to trek across Northeast Land to Kings Bay. They carried approximately 50 pounds of provisions, but so far as is known had no arms.

MALMGREN ICE VETERAN

The purpose of the group was to reach the Kings Bay base to bring help back to their comrades stranded near Foyn Island in a tiny encampment centered about a small red tent.

Dr. Malmgren was widely experienced in life in the Arctic because of his previous studies as a meteorologist in that region. While he was known to be well able to take care of himself and his two companions despite the Arctic hardships, it was feared that the handicap facing them was too great and that they never would be heard from. No definite word of them was heard from the time they left the other men. Several overland expeditions equipped with dog teams were in constant search for them and the various planes which have scoured the district were on a constant lookout in an effort to trace them.

A message was received in Moscow today stating that the Russian flier Chukhnovsky, who has been making flights from the icebreaker Krassin, now near Foyn Island, made the discovery in the course of a reconnaissance flight.

20 MILES FROM SHIP

The Russian airman found Dr. Malmgren and his two companions at 80:42 north latitude and 25:45 east longitude, about 20 miles from the present position of the Krassin. This is west of Cape Platen, Northeast Land.

The pilot this afternoon was searching for a place to make a landing near the party in order to pick them up.

The airman reported that he circled the men five times. Two of the party energetically waved a flag to him. The third was lying down.

ARTIST TO DRAW 'KIDS' AT SHOW

The first 3,000 members of the "Just Kids Safety Club" who come to the Grand Theater Saturday will have an opportunity of seeing Ad Carter, Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Newspaper cartoonist, who created "Just Kids."

In addition to hearing Mr. Carter talk, they will see him draw pictures of "Mush," "Fatso," "Marjory" and the others who go to make up the famous comic strip.

Beginning tonight Mr. Carter will appear on three Harris Amusement Company stages in Pittsburgh. Tonight he will be on the stage of the Sheridan Square Theater, East Liberty, at 9:15 o'clock. Thursday evening he will appear at the Harris South Hills Theater in Dormont, the downtown Harris Theater and at Sheridan Square. In addition to talking about "Just Kids," he will draw the characters for his audience.

Mr. Carter, who is spending this week in Pittsburgh as the guest of The Sun-Telegraph, was the principal speaker Tuesday at the banquet of the Portland Cement Association in the William Penn Hotel, where he told of the beginning of the "Just Kids Safety Clubs," which now have a total membership of 2,000,000. There are 40,000 members in Pittsburgh.

Besides hearing and watching Mr. Carter at work, the children will see "Harold Teen," a five-reel motion picture, which is to be shown at the Grand next week. The Grand management is giving a special preshowing of the picture to members of the "Just Kids Clubs."

Besides talking to the Portland Cement Association, Mr. Carter talked yesterday before a group of industrial experts in the State Department of Labor and Industry and before two groups in the Congress of Women's Clubs.

Today's program will include appearances of Mr. Carter at the luncheon clubs and tonight at the Boy Scout encampment near Sewickley.

QUIZ BARES PAYMENTS

ATLANTA, July 11.—(AP.)—With few witnesses remaining to be heard here, the Senate committee investigating alleged irregularities in administration of postoffice patronage by the Republican organization in Georgia was ready to transfer its activities temporarily to Washington.

Senator Smith W. Brookheart (Rep.), Iowa, said the Georgia hearing would be closed during the day and that the committee next would meet in Washington to hear Postmaster General New before proceeding with hearings in other states where complaints similar to those in Georgia have arisen.

Meanwhile, with Mrs. Mable Walker Willebrandt, assistant U. S. attorney general, en route to Biloxi, Miss., to ask grand jury investigation of charges in that state, the committee said it would watch the proceedings closely and follow up with its own inquiry soon.

A few postmasters were among the witnesses summoned to appear

FIEND KILLS 4 IN ONE FAMILY

SLAYING IS MYSTERY

EDMONTON, Alta, July 11.—(AP.)—The slaying of Mrs. Eunice Booher, wife of a prosperous Manville farmer, her 25-year-old son and two hired men today was a complete mystery to police. Vernon Booher, another son, told the police he discovered the bodies Monday night when he hurried to the house on hearing shots shortly after he had left to bring in the cows.

In the dining room, he said, he found the body of his mother, shot from behind, her head split open from the impact of a rifle bullet. In the kitchen was the body of his brother Fred, shot through the mouth and back.

Rushing out to the barn to seek assistance from the hired men, he said he found Bill Roszak, one of the hands, dead in the barn, a bullet hole in the back of his head. In the bunkhouse was the body of the other, Gabriel Goronby, shot through the mouth.

BOROUGH RAPS SQUIRE

DENIES HE KEPT $150

Justice of the Peace George Beltzhoover, of Castle Shannon, vigorously denied today that he had been remiss in turning over fines due the borough, as was alleged at the Borough Council meeting last night. He was accused of holding back about $150 and Borough Solicitor S. A. Schreiner was instructed to start legal proceedings to recover the money.

Beltzhoover, a justice of the peace for more than 15 years, said no demand had ever been made on him for the money he is alleged to owe the borough, and that the first inkling of the matter came to his attention only this morning.

Burt Peters presented a petition to the Council, signed by 56 residents of Castle Shannon, asking for the dismissal of Constable John Massung, former acting chief of police, and Specila Officer Nathan Siskind. They are accused of having adopted improper methods in arresting citizens for not getting dog licenses.

AIR RACERS IN KOREA

TOKIO, July 11.—(AP.)—John H. Mears and Charles G. D. Collyer, seeking a new record for around the world travel, landed at Pingyang, Korea, at 8:13 a. m. Today from Mukden, Manchuria. After a brief rest they hopped off again for Tokio at 9:10 a. m.

PASS HALFWAY MARK

By JOHN HENRY MEARS.

(Copyright, 1928, by the New York American, Inc.)

CHITA, Siberia, July 10.—More than halfway around the world in 10 days, is our record so far.

This gives us hope that we will get around the globe in 23½ days, in accordance with our program.

We now are right on our schedule for the first time since leaving New York, having flown 1,600 miles yesterday, when we made as high as 150 miles an hour with the aid of a tail wind. We flew as high as 12,000 feet above the earth in order to get that wind.

I'll tell the world that it is cold up there, but the way Capt. Collyer picks out towns in this wilderness is uncanny.

The flying fields all through Russia are the finest anywhere in the world. These Russians are taking up aviation efficiently, and their "Osiaviakim" society for aerial and chemical defense is working splendidly for the advancement of flying.

Chita Field was lighted when he arrived. Flares and smoke bombs were thrown up to guide our landing, which was made long after dark.

Next, we are tackling China, and I wish we could get some laundry done. There is nothing we need more than a good bath. The next time I start on a trip like this, I'll coat myself with shellac and then dust myself off every morning.

We leave Soviet land with regret. For courtesy and kindness, the Russians come first on this trip. I want to thank them, now that we are leaving their boundaries.

(John Henry Mears and Charles G. D. Collyer are to break the present record by encircling the globe in less than 28 days. To win, they must reach Yokohama to catch the steamer sailing July 12. They send their story daily, by cable and by radio, exclusively in Pittsburgh to The Sun Telegraph.

"DAILY" CALLED BEST EDUCATOR

DETROIT, July 11.—(AP.)—Merchants and manufacturers have only begun to "scratch the surface" in their efforts to harness the daily newspaper as an advertising force, G. Adolphe Weidemann, of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, said yesterday in addressing newspaper advertising executives of th World Advertising Congress.

"The daily newspaper is more powerful than school or college, because it serves as the university of the people," he said. Weidemann credited the American newspapers with having "made the masses of the American nation the best informed and instructed peoples of the world."

He pointed out that correspondents "on the job daily in all parts of the world make it possible for the newspaper reader to see almost eye to eye what they see and learn."

In his annual report to the church advertising department, Charles Stelzle, of New York, president, said that due to the co-operation of newspapers, press associations, radio stations and the government, "there has been a decided increase in the interest in religious news" during the last year.

SQUANDERS $97,000

BANK THIEF HAS FLING

International News Service.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Having had his fling—a $97,000 fling on stolen money—George W. Anderson, absconding bank teller, was back in town today prepared to "face the music."

Five months ago young Anderson was a valued employe of the Calumet National Bank. He was married to the president's niece and gave promise of becoming one of the leading bankers of Illinois. A month later he had mysteriously disappeared and a shortage of $97,000 was discovered in his accounts.

Late yesterday police answered a summons to a South Side flat. A woman complained there was a "drunken hobo asleep in the basement." The man was George Anderson. He was found on a bed of rags, grimy and unshaven, with only 30 cents in his pockets.

"TOO SMART!"

"That's all that's left out of $97,000," said Anderson bitterly. "I used to think I was a financial genius—too smart for the banking business. Well, there's three dimes left. Give 'em back to the bank that owns them and put me where I belong."

Anderson told of his wild pace in Paris. He was a grandee of the boulevards, the favorite patron of head waiters and the darling of the demoiselles. He was the envy of Americans who knew not how he got it. Then a jaunt to Monte Carlo and a mad whirl of gambling. He went "broke," and driven by conscience and remorse, joined the French Foreign Legion to "forget."

But he couldn't escape his memories, so he deserted the legion and "bummed" his way to America.

FIND WILL OF BANKER

International News Service.

BRUSSELS, July 11.—The will of Capt. Alfred Loewenstein, Belgian financier who disappeared from his plane while flying across the English Channel, has been found, but the surrogate judge here has refused to open it until he has received official confirmation of the banker's death, it was learned today.

The judge did not flatly refuse to issue a certificate of death by accident, but simply shelved the matter until he received a report from the French and British authorities with the following statement:

"Lowenstein was flying in an English plane over French territorial waters. It is a much simpler matter for the English and French authorities to investigate the case."

It had been expected here that great difficulty would be encountered in locating the will. No estimate of the estate left by Lowenstein was made public.

Funeral services for Lowenstein were held by his family here today.

YOUNG WOMAN DROWNED WADING IN MONONGAHELA

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., July 11.—(AP.)—Miss Mary Boyd, 18, was drowned while wading in the Monongahela River at Maidsville Landing yesterday when she stepped from a log into deep water. The girl had been wading with her sister, Pearl, and with Mrs. Nellie Cummings. None of the party could swim.

DR. BASH DIES IN SOUTH

PGH. M. E. PASTOR SUCCUMBS

The Rev. Dr. Appleton Bash, well-known Methodist Episcopal minister, whose home was at 1301 Peermont avenue, Dormont, died early today at the Knoxville (Tenn.) General Hospital after a sudden illness. Dr. Bash had been in Tennessee since April 1, conducting a campaign for a $500,000 endowment for the Tennessee Wesleyan College at Athens, Tenn. He was 66 years old.

Dr. Bash was born in Indiana, Pa., March 21, 1862, the eldest of the five children of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Bash. His father was an ironworker.

He attended Millersville Normal School, and from there went to Allegheny College, from which he was graduated, later receiving the degrees of doctor of divinity and doctor of philosophy. He received his theological education in Mt. Union College.

Dr. Bash was ordained as a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1885. Among his pastorates were the Arch Street Church, North Side; the First Church, Beaver; the First Church, Sewickley, and the First Church, Waynesburg.

In 1911 he became executive secretary for the Pittsburgh district of the annuity endowment campaign of the Methodist Episcopal Church and was engaged in that work until 1924.

For eight years he was chaplain of the Eighteenth Regiment, N. G. P., and was with the regiment on the Mexican border at the time when Gen. Francisco Villa was carrying on his outrages against Americans.

IN FUND CAMPAIGNS

Following his work for the annuity endowment Dr. Bash became superintendent of the Methodist Home for the Aged at Mt. Lebanon. He resigned that position last year and went to New York to assist in raising money for the Broadway Temple, a skyscraper church building. When that task was finished he accepted the assignment to Tennessee on which he was working when he died.

Dr. Bash was married in 1885 to Miss May Bell Swearer. Besides her, he leaves three children—Miss Vera Bash, head of the English department at Peabody High School; James Bash, with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and Lawson Bash, with the Aluminum Company of America, and who only recently returned from a five-year sojourn in India.

Dr. Bash also leaves two sisters—Mrs. Ella Loughry, of the North Side, the widow of the Rev. E. G. Loughry, and Mrs. Carl Humbert, of Rye, N. Y.

before the committee yesterday. One postmaster related how he had paid 5 per cent of his salary to the state central committee. Another witness declared he was asked $500 for a reappointment for his wife as postmistress at Ball Ground, Ga.

S. N. Thompson, of East Point, was the postmaster who said he paid regularly 5 per cent of his income until a year ago. He paid it willingly because he "believed it the duty of an office holder to support his party," he said, but admitted that he did not think a postmaster could hold his job unless he did contribute. A party "had to be run like any other business," he said.

Miss Esther McCollum, postmistress at Conyers, Ga., told the committee that she was a Republican and believed it her duty to contribute to party funds. She said she had contributed about $100 annually, but declared she never had been assessed or solicited.

SEWICKLEY MAY VOTE ON BONDS

Sewickley borough is planning a $350,000 bond issue to be voted on this fall, it was learned last night when council asked the borough law department for advice on the subject. The issue is to clear the borough of several debts, the chief item being the $125,000 due Pennsylvania Railroad Company for eight years, when the company agreed to move their tracks to the outskirts of the borough. An item of $130,000 is for the moving of the new water plant, necessitated by the shifting of the railroad tracks, and $40,000 for the erection of a garbage plant. There are several other small items.

HEAT RELIEF REMOTE

CAR DOOR SLAMMED, RIDER INJURED, SUES

Declaring that a street car door had been slammed in his face while he was on the step of the car, knocking him to the street, Stanley Smith brought suit for $25,000 yesterday in Common Pleas Court against the Pittsburgh Railways Company. The accident occurred May 5 at Penn avenue and Twenty-sixth street. Smith says he suffered concussion of the brain.

HUMID WEATHER MAY LAST WEEK

WASHINGTON, July 11.—(AP.)—The heat wave gripping the eastern section of the country for more than a week originated in the western Gulf of Mexico, gained in intensity as the hot air rolled north and east over the sizzling plains of Texas and other states and may not end for a week or more, Dr. C. L. Mitchell, United States weather forecaster said today.

The relief enjoyed by the East yesterday was due to cloudy skies and showers that prevented the sun from adding heat to the breezes blowing gently along the seaboard, but that relief is only temporary, the forecaster said. The heat wave, he added, will not be broken until cool breezes from the North or Northwest sweep the country and bring down the temperature of the hot winds from the gulf. There is yet no indication of the coming of such winds, he declared.

Explaining the origin of the heat wave, Dr. Mitchell said that it was not unseasonal. Winds over the Gulf of Mexico, he stated, moved northward over the hot Texas plains, gaining in heat each day. The gain, he said, was due to the fact that short nights did not allow sufficient darkness to cool the winds.

The duration of the heat wave, the forecaster said, would be from two to three days to a week or longer.

Policeman Eugene MacFarland arrested Brendoage early yesterday at the home of Harry Kokis, in the rear of 344 Eighth avenue, Homestead.

FIRE DAMAGES EAST END SHOP

Fire of unknown origin in the shop of C. C. Kepple, dealer in toilet goods, in the basement of the one-story brick building at 530-532 Trenton avenue, Wilkinsburg, did $200 damage early today. LUMPS in his throat

THE little something that's gone wrong . . . it seems very big to him just now. And it gives him that choky feeling in his throat . . . as though his heart were there and couldn't be swallowed down.

Every mother knows those pitiful sobbing days, when her child grieves and will not be comforted. And she knows too that they come when serious dangerous things are happening inside the child's body . . .

THE poisons of fatigue, of course, get bottled up in children's bodies just as they do in adults'.

Yet mothers feel particularly unwilling to shock delicate little bodies by giving harsh, ordinary laxatives . . .

Feen-a-mint is different!

It is just like a bit of delicious chewing gum. You don't swallow it—you chew it!

Its magic laxative principle is released slowly, the way science meant it to be released. It actually becomes part of the digestive fluids—does not disturb digestion. It works with the body—not against it!

It won't torture you with griping pains. It won't poison or weaken the system. It won't enslave you to laxative pills. Begin now to correct constipation this modern, scientific way.

HEALTHY URGED TO SEE DOCTOR

(This is the third article that The Sun-Telegraph is printing at the solicitation of the Chamber of Commerce in order to aid in the promotion of periodical health examinations as the most effective means yet discovered for the prevention of sickness and the lengthening of human life.)

It is not the sick who are being entreated to have these examinations, but apparently healthy people who believe that there is nothing wrong with them.

If there is nothing wrong with them a thorough examination is the best way of proving it. On the other hand, it is not denied that many serious chronic diseases develop slowly, at first without any noticeable symptoms. A man or woman who is not aware of having any weakness or any incipient disorder may actually have a condition from which serious trouble will come unless counteracted within a few weeks or months.

The possibility of heading off deadly maladies by early discovery is particularly true of the five deadliest diseases known to medical science. These diseases are heart disease, nephritis (Bright's disease), pneumonia, cancer and apoplexy.

The latest issue of "Pennsylvania Health," the official journal of the Pennsylvania State Department of Health, refers to the five diseases mentioned as the master criminals, because they killed more than one-half of all the people who died in Pennsylvania during 1927. Of the total of 110,335 deaths in the state in 1927 these five causes alone accounted for 57,397. The comment of the State Department of Health upon the foregoing figures is:

STEALTHY APPROACH

"There is no more startling information available upon which to base a plea to the middle-aged men and women of the commonwealth annually to submit to a thorough physical examination. These diseases, with the exception of apoplexy and pneumonia, are frequently stealthy in their approach, and dig in so far before they are even suspected by the subjects themselves as to make the ministrations of physicians of little avail. Why not be sensible?"

The American Medical Association declares in a recently published manual of suggestions on periodical examinations that many of the people who come to doctors believing themselves sound in all respects are found to have symptoms of disease when questioned.

MOST NEED TREATMENT

At the Cornell University Health Clinic about 44 per cent of the applicants needed only hygienic advice as to exercise, diet and care of the body, including dental attention and rest. The other 56 per cent needed medical treatment.

Of those who were not sent to the clinic but came of their own accord 37 per cent considered themselves perfectly well. Of those sent to the clinic by their employers from industrial establishments 66 per cent believed themselves to be in perfect health. Yet the large majority of them were found to need treatment of some sort — other in order to prevent them from developing actual sickness.

In tomorrow's article the vital importance of early diagnosis in cancer and a number of other diseases will be emphasized.

COAL TRESPASS ORDER STANDS

Judge Elder W. Marshall, in Common Pleas Court, this morning continued the injunction asked for by the Pittsburgh Coal Company against the United States Coal and Supply Company prohibiting the latter company from trespassing on the Pittsburgh Coal Company's property.

It was testified by witnesses for the Pittsburgh Coal Company that the United States Coal and Supply Company had removed 45,000 tons of coal from the former company's property. The injunction will continue until September.

BONDS CARRY AT HOMESTEAD

Homestead's $125,000 bond issue was passed yesterday at a special election, a heavy vote being cast in favor of the issue, which will be used for borough street improvements. A vote of more than two to one in favor of the issue was reported.

Don't fool yourself

Since halitosis never announces itself to the victim, you simply cannot know when you have it.

Halitosis ruins romance—end it

To meet anyone with halitosis even occasionally is bad enough, but to be married to one is indeed a trial. No wonder husbands are less considerate—wives less tender.

Don't fool yourself that you never have halitosis. Since it does not announce itself to the victim, you simply cannot know when you have it. Unknowingly you may offend.

Why take the chance at all? Simply use Listerine every day. Then, if you have halitosis, Listerine ends it. If you haven't—your mouth has had the benefit that Listerine always gives.

Listerine ends halitosis because it is a powerful deodorant. If you need proof of this, rub a bit of onion on your hand and then apply a bit of Listerine clear. Immediately, the odor is gone. Even the strong odor of fish yields to this treatment.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

WITH ALL THEIR FAULTS

AN INTERESTING man is one in whose company you can spend a whole evening without once thinking of turning on the radio.

The greatest adventure in a man's life is the discovery of the work for which he was intended; the greatest adventure in a woman's is the discovery of the man for whom she was intended.

No, Gloria, the secret of success in marriage is not mutual independence, but perfect TEAMWORK.

HELEN ROWLAND

Telling a man that a girl would make him a nice, sensible wife is about as effective these days as trying to arouse his appetite for spinach by telling him that it is good for him.

Before marriage, when a girl guesses a man's thoughts he is astonished at her intuition; after marriage, when she keeps on guessing them, he is annoyed at her "hallucination."

As charity covereth a multitude of sins, so a good disposition in a husband throws a softening glamor over a lot of bad habits.

When a woman finds out that her husband has gotten his stenographer to sew the buttons on his coat, she is so torn between contrition and suspicion that she doesn't know whether to rush out and buy a package of needles or to see a lawyer.

Never lie awake worrying about the woman a man once loved. Keep your eye on all the women he has not YET loved.

Most young moderns secretly regard the Good Ship Matrimony as an unseaworthy old ARK, and divorce as the life preserver.

Somehow a man can't help liking a woman who openly admires him; it puts them right on the same wire, and starts them off with a mutual enthusiasm about which they will never quarrel.

FOR THE LOVELORN

Watching and Waiting

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am 20 years old and a brunette. I have been going with a fellow two months, but we have been going together off and on since last August. I care a lot for him and he tells me he loves me, but still he doesn't take me to any amusements. Miss Gale, do you think he cares for me if he tells me to go out with other fellows and enjoy myself, although he does not go out with any other girl.

He works steady, but when he gets paid he spends it all before he reaches his home, so do you think I should do as he told me to do or just wait? When I did go out with somebody else I was never satisfied because it seems as though nobody else can take his place.

The fellows and girls tell me things about him and when I go and tell him what they say he always asks me if I believe them, then I don't know what to say, so please advise me.

Hoping to see this in print soon and thanking you very much, I remain,

WATCHING AND WAITING.

How does he spend his money, my dear? If he squanders it on himself, then his love for you is not very real. But if he is saving it, it may be that he loves you and hopes to marry you some day.

Elaine

DEAR MISS GALE:

You have helped so many of my friends that I thought you could help me. I am a sophomore in high school and am very much in love with a boy six weeks my junior. Of course, we only go to basketball games together and go around generally in that way. Of all the boys in our "set" I like him the most. I am not allowed to go out with boys, as my school work isn't up to par and I have to work hard to get my lessons. This boy friend of mine who will be called Lancelot for the sake of calling him something, is also a sophomore and of about the same age as I am, except the six weeks. Should this come between us, Miss Gale? He is all I admire in a boy. Strong, fearless and a real gentleman of the "old school." He knows I like him and I'm pretty sure he likes me, but sometimes it seems as if he is very indifferent. How can I find out? Should one ever write notes to boys in school, or isn't it proper? I shall be anxiously awaiting a reply and can't say how much you will be helping me if you will answer through your wonderful column. Wishing you oceans of luck.

ELAINE.

Don't worry about the six weeks, Elaine. It means nothing at all. This boy must like you, so just take it for granted that he does. I wouldn't write notes to him if I were you.

Desperate

DEAR MISS GALE:

Since you have helped so many others, I hope that you can help me. But it seems like almost a hopeless case. I am engaged to be married to the best friend of a boy that I have gone with for four years. It was through Tom that I met the man I am now going to marry. They love each other like brothers and would do anything for each other. I really loved John until last night. I have always considered Tom my best friend, and my brother, and the nicest boy in the world all together. I always confided in him and accepted his advice. But, oh Miss Gale, I never suspected that he loved me. I can see now how blind I have been and I hate to think how I have hurt him. The other night he confessed his love for me. He told me he was going away, because he could not bear to be John's best man, feeling as he did. Miss Gale, I love him, too. I guess I always have. But every day is bringing the date of my wedding to John nearer. I don't love him, but should I marry him anyway to keep from breaking his heart? Would it be fair to him to marry him, loving Tom as I do? Please publish the answer soon.

DESPERATE.

Don't by any means marry one man while you love another. But be very sure that your love is real this time, before breaking your engagement. You will hurt your finance very much, of course, but it is much better to hurt him now than to make him unhappy all his life, which you would do if you married him without loving him.

Wondering

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have written to you several times before but never saw my letters in print. I do not know why, but am hoping you will answer this as I am in need of your wonderful advice. I am a girl in the teens and in high school. Now, Miss Gale, I write notes with a fellow whom I have known for a long time. We both go with other friends and he always seemed like a brother to me. Lately he has been doing a few things that are going to ruin his reputation. Should I tell him about it and ask him to try and do better? I myself do not drink or smoke. There is still another question I want to ask you and that is: How old do you think a girl should be before going out with fellows? I don't mean to take them seriously, just to have a good time such as bringing you home from a party. I am,

WONDERING.

Don't offer advice too freely, my dear, but if you are particularly good friends you might discuss the situation with this boy. A girl of 17 is old enough to go out with boys.

The See-Saw -:- -:- By Truda Dahl.

© 1928, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

WHAT fun we used to have on the old see-saw when we were children? Do you remember how you used to squeal in fright when you were way up in the air and couldn't get back on the ground? And with what gales of laughter you listened to the shrieks of those on the other end when you had them way up and "they" wanted to get down?

A childish game, true, but how symbolic it is of life and love. We're on the see-saw every moment of life, sometimes up, sometimes down in a constant bewildering succession. And when we're on the see-saw of love with Dan Cupid standing between us, what a thrill it is! Then there's nothing to be afraid of, for when Love guides things, there's nothing at all to fear—even on a see-saw, when we don't know exactly what's going to happen next. But it all comes out right and we land safely and forget the see-saw for awhile, until the first ecstasy is over—then we start in all over again.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Thursday, July 12

A DAY of enterprise and adventure is the presage read from the astral activities, although there is some danger of a too aggressive and turbulent policy. It would be well to curb the tongue and temper lest these incite to unfavorable conditions. There is likewise some threat of loss and accident, unless proper control be exercised in the behavior. Employment is under fortunate rule.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very lively and enterprising year, but the best interests may be jeopardized by a tendency to rash, turbulant and excitable deeds. Loss and accidents may be prevented by caution and calmness.

A child born on this day may be disposed to be quick-tempered and aggressive; unless these be kept in subjection it may encounter many difficulties. It should make its best success in the employment of others.

Adventures are to the adventurous.—PROVERB.

Love's Embers Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife" By Adele Garrison

Dicky Voices His Objection to Madge's Tutoring

I WAS so astonished at Dicky's clairvoyance—I could think of no other fitting word—that for a second or two I stared at him, with my amazement written all over my face. He had hit unerringly upon the very thing which Philip Veritzen had planned to do—to pretend to Eleanor Lincoln that he meant to make a great actress of her, while in reality he intended to put every possible obstacle in her path. I was sure that he was not in the great producer's confidence—the two men were too antagonistic for that. Yet how could he have known this thing?

But I was to have further proof of my husband's keenness of insight.

"Oh-ho!" he exclaimed with a swift, keen glance at my astonished face. "So you know all about it—I suppose dear old Phil confided in you, but you're wondering how the devil I got hep. Well, just keep on wondering, old dear, it's a good mental exercise. But just now I'm waiting for the rest of the beans you started to dish. Where do you come in in this double-crossing scheme of Phil's?"

"Your offensive manner of questioning does not deserve an answer," I told him icily, "but I will give you one, nevertheless. Mr. Veritzen told Miss Lincoln that the first requisite of her work would be a thorough knowledge of the history of the drama, and he naturally suggested me, the head of his research department, as the person in his organization best fitted to teach her. He has relieved me of other duties in order to give me time for the work. She is not a very satisfactory pupil, however, and after her second lesson today, I told her we would have no more until next Tuesday. That will give her ample time not only to prepare her lesson but to give you the hours you need for your sketches of her."

Dicky gave another short, sneering laugh.

"Always the devoted wife with my interests at heart, aren't you?" he said. "Well, for so much consideration I thank you. But that isn't the main question. When I consented to this fool scheme of yours for going into Veritzen's organization as his Grand High Panjandrum of historical lore, I didn't agree that you should take on a side line of being a nursery governess for his protegees and I won't have it."

He struck his first against the chair back in emphasis, and I saw that in his usual fashion he was working himself up to a display of temper which he thought might be effective in gaining his point.

I waited for several seconds before I answered him, looking at him steadily the while. Then I spoke slowly, frigidly.

"I think I must have misunderstood you. Did I hear you say 'when I consented to this scheme'?"

He reddened angrily but stood his ground.

"That's what I said," he answered sullenly.

"Then I am sure your memory is at fault," I said. "I have no recollection whatever of asking your consent to this work."

"You know very well you couldn't have done it unless I had consented," he shouted.

I permitted myself a wintry smile at him.

"Dear me! what an antiquated caveman you are!" I exclaimed. "But permit me to set you right. I not only could have done it without your consent, but I did act on my own initiative in the matter. And—I hate to be discourteous, but you really force me to it—I shall continue to exercise that prerogative."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.

U.S. Senator From New York

Increase in Weight a Test of Health

DID it ever occur to you that babies need exercise and should be encouraged to take it? This is just as necessary for them as for adults.

DR. COPELAND

They will take on surplus flesh just as grown-ups do.

The surest test of the welfare of the infant is the regular weekly increase in weight. But you don't want the added weight to be fat merely. You want the baby to be strong and muscular and not merely "roly-poly."

A new baby moves very little. But within a few weeks it begins to kick and toss its arms about. If its clothing and coverings permit, it indulges in the freest muscular movements.

The young mother must bear in mind that a tiny baby is a very delicate morsel of humanity. Its back must be supported until the muscles develop.

It is not well to lift the baby by grasping the chest under the arms. The best way is to lift the lower part of the body by the clothing and then slip the flat hands under the back. This permits full support of the back and head and guards against accidents.

The dress of the baby should be so simple as to permit the freest possible movements of the limbs. It will be better still to let the undressed infant play on a blanket. This is equal to the gymnasium training its parents take.

Spread out a blanket on the grass or on the floor in the sunshine, if it is not too bright. Let the baby roll and kick and sprawl and crawl. This gives free action for every muscle and you may be sure the youngster will make use of all the muscles if given half a chance.

When the child is taken out in the baby carriage, thought must be given to its posture. When the child is several months old, no longer will it be satisfied to lie flat on its back. It will be happier if propped up on extra pillows, supporting the sides, as well as the back.

Don't treat your infant as if it were a wax lily. Bear in mind all the time that the baby is a strong young animal, entitled to all the privileges and freedom of the natural life.

Study the young chickens, kittens, foxes, birds—all the lower forms of life give freedom to the little ones and, indeed, the birds encourage it to the extent of pushing the young out of the nest. The baby will grow and wax strong if given half a chance. Don't hamper the infant by pinning it down too closely.

Let the muscles perform and you promote the good temper. A baby glories in liberty. Gurgles and coos of delight are your reward.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Rising Mercury Induces Pittsburghers to Hasten to Summer Homes and Tours Abroad

FROM all appearances, Pittsburgh is going to be a deserted city soon. It seems that nearly everyone has either gone away or is planning to leave town within a very short time. And it is time, too, because the mercury is climbing higher and higher, in spite of all the efforts of the weather man.

Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh, of "Llanfair Lodge," Woodland road, is one who is leaving for a cooler climate. She is going to go up to her summer home at Belle Isle, Beaumaris, Canada, and is leaving this week, I understand. And one of last winter's debutantes, Anne Virginia Pugh, and her mother, Mrs. Claude Freeman Pugh, sailed not long ago for England. Anne was graduated from Wellesley in June, you know, and she and her mother sailed shortly after commencement, I believe. Among the other local folks abroad are Mrs. Robert E. Withers and her son, Kent, of Aiken avenue. They are touring through England.

Another of last winter's buds, Nan Bunton, daughter of the C. C. Buntons, has just got back from a fortnight's visit at Conneaut Lake. She was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. C. M. Budd, who, you will remember, entertained for Nan last winter when she came out. And Mrs. A. M. Lynn is visiting her sister, Mrs. William Jordan, of Birmingham, Ala., at her summer home at Watch Hill. Mrs. Lynn's sister-in-law, Mrs. A. B. Lynn, is planning to take a motor trip to St. Louis later in the summer.

DID you know that we have a well known author visiting in town? Mrs. Emily Newell Blair is here as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. M. N. Forsythe, of Shady avenue.

Also a visitor out of town is Mrs. Frederick Baird, who is in New York. Mrs. Baird's daughter, Nancy, has been studying art in Gotham, and her mother is visiting her, and Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee, of Ben Avon, is, I hear, touring the Ozark mountains in Oklahoma, inspecting the playgrounds.

WE are going to have another interesting wedding this month, it seems, Margaret Crutchfield, daughter of the James Stapleton Crutchfields, of Sewickley, is going to marry Andrew Tod Roy, son of the Frank C. Jordans, of Riverview avenue, on July 26 in her home in Beaver road. The ceremony is set for 5:30 o'clock and will be a very quiet one.

I UNDERSTAND that Mary Lapsley Caughey, daughter of the Edward Grant Caugheys, of Sewickley, whose engagement to Dr. George Martin Guest, of Cincinnati, was announced not long ago, has gone to Cornwell-on-the-Hudson, New York, to spend several weeks. With her is Gene Vive Taggard, the well-known poet, of New York, who was visiting in Sewickley. Several parties were given for Miss Taggard while she was in the Valley.

JUST an informal affair was the bridge luncheon which Mrs. Robert T. M. McCready gave yesterday afternoon at her home, "Meadow Garden," in Edgeworth. Flowers from the garden were used on the table and in decorating the rooms.

IN St. Stephen's Episcopal Church at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the marriage of Miss Louise Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Thompson, of Lloyd street, Edgewood, and William E. Standeven, of East Aurora, N. Y., will be solemnized by the Rev. George M. Brewin. Mrs. Hugo E. Beckert, of Stockton, Cal., will be Miss Thompson's matron of honor and Mrs. Eugene E. Burke, of Wilkinsburg, her bridesmaid. Stanley B. Abbott, of Hamburg, N. Y., will serve as best man and, as ushers, the party will include A. F. Carson, of Jacksonville and Pittsburgh, and William A. Reed, of North Ulmsted, O. A number of out of town guests are here for the wedding and also will be present at the reception and supper which are to follow in the Thompson home. These include the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Standeven, and his cousin, Mrs. L. Billington, of East Aurora, Miss Helen E. Silliman, of Hollywood and Miss Grace Cowan, Mrs. Howard Sand, Miss Josephine Sand and Howard Sand, Jr., all of Buffalo. Upon the completion of their wedding trip, Mr. Standeven and his bride will be at home in East Aurora.

MRS. HARRY S. DAVIDSON, of Beechwood boulevard, gave a bridge luncheon yesterday in the Pittsburgh Golf Club in honor of Miss Margaret Gwendolyn Koch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Koch, of Sheridan avenue, whose engagement to Townsend Bongardt, of Philadelphia, was recently announced. There were 50 guests and they played bridge on the club veranda. Miss Koch has chosen October 24 as the date for her marriage.

THE marriage of Miss Velma Downing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Downing, of Glenfield, and Sheldon T. Henry, of West View, was solemnized Monday in the Downing home by the Rev. S. L. Burson, pastor of the Glenfield Methodist Episcopal Church. Miss Florence Henry and Harold Henry, sister and brother of the bridegroom, were the attendants. After a trip to Mountain Lake Park, Md., Mr. and Mrs. Henry will be at home in Cleveland.

MISS ANGELA GARRIGAN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Garrigan, of North Fairmont avenue, was married yesterday morning to Lawrence J. Bridge, of Latrobe. The wedding was solemnized in St. Lawrence's Roman Catholic Church by the Rev. Philip Callery. Following the wedding breakfast at the home of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Bridge left on a motor trip to the east. On their return they will live in Latrobe.

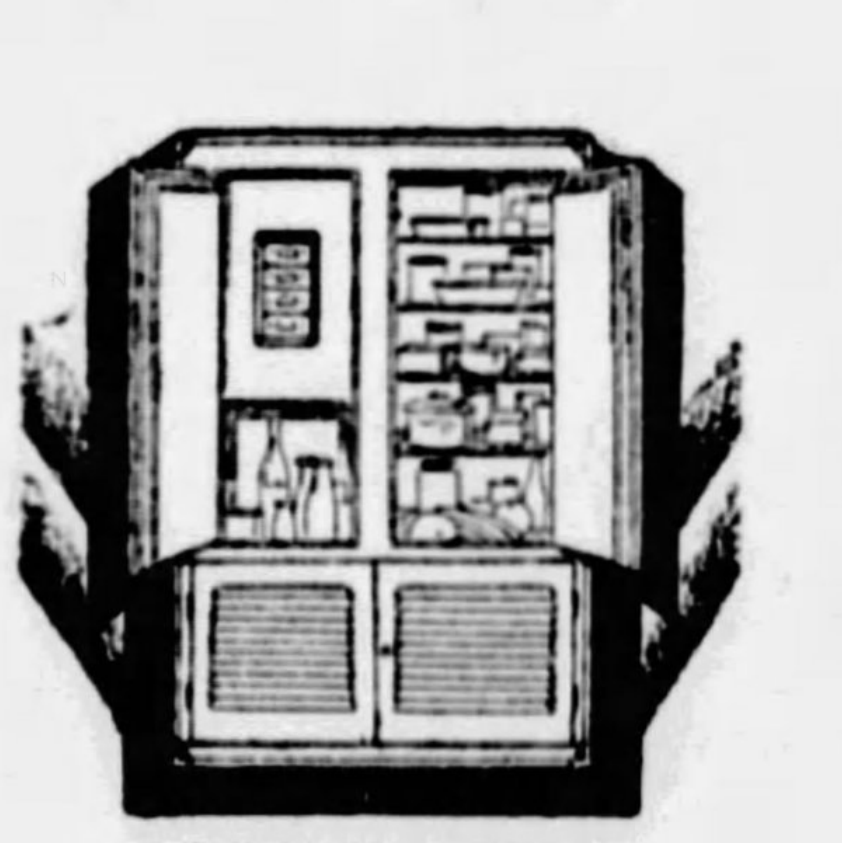
MANY interesting and instructive exhibits showing the evolution of food preservation will be demonstrated at a special showing sponsored by the Frigidaire Corporation, July 9 to 14, in Kaufmann's Auditorium.



FRIGIDAIRE

THE modern way of food preservation in the home is automatic refrigeration by electricity. Meats, vegetables and foods of all kinds can be kept for many days. The constant frigid temperature maintains a healthful, a dry-cold refrigeration at all times. Electric refrigeration is really economical.

DESSERTS and salads can be prepared well in advance of meal-time and quickly chilled to a delicious crispness. Large trays are provided in the electric refrigerator for the freezing of crystal cubes of ice so convenient for the making of cold drinks and for general table use.

How To Be Beautiful

by Maria Jeritza

Hints on the Care of Bleached Hair.

"HOW can I restore my gray hair to its original color?" This question recurs over and over in my correspondence. My humble suggestion is that you think twice before deciding to dye your tresses their original tint. Of course the color of hair cannot literally be restored. We do not understand Nature's secrets well enough to change gray hair back to blonde or black. But it is possible to dye hair to approximately its original shade. It is well to remember, that when the hair naturally changes its hue, the skin also grows slightly darker or more pale as the case may be, which keeps the color scheme harmonious. This fact should be taken into consideration before impulsively changing one's type by means of dyes or bleaches.

There always have been, however, and possibly always will be, many women who insist that for perfectly good reasons they must dye their hair. To these my advice is: Have the work done by an expert. Amateur work in this line is seldom safe or successful.

Go to the very best hair specialist in your vicinity. Let him examine your scalp and hair, then follow his advice as to whether in your case, a dye or bleach can be successfully applied and renewed whenever new hairs grow in, at a cost within the limit of your pocketbook. Use whatever bleach or dye he recommends for your particular head of hair.

Henna, when used in sufficient quantity, dyes hair golden red. It is harmless, even beneficial. Unless it is mixed with ammonia or a strong chemical.

You may like to try this henna wash, which will not dye or even bleach your hair, but should bring out all its bright lights by cutting soap curd and grease.

Slice a cake of pure castile soap into a saucepan. Add to it two ounces of powdered henna, a teaspoonful of boric acid and one quart of boiling water. Let the mixture simmer until the soap dissolves.

Pour very warm water over your head, then rub a cupful of the henna mixture into your scalp and hair. Rinse it out with hot water. Rub in a second cupful, manipulate your scalp with your fingertips, and again rinse your hair and scalp with hot water. Next rub in a third cupful, and pinning a towel about your head, let the henna sink in 10 minutes. Finally, put your scalp and hair through several warm water rinses and let the last be a lemon rinse, which consists of the juice of one large lemon squeezed into two quarts of warm water.

Here is a shampoo especially designed for dyed and bleached hair: Beat six or eight eggs lightly and add to the mixture one tablespoon of water. Rub half of this shampoo into your scalp and hair until the friction makes the eggs foam. Rinse it out thoroughly with hot water. Now apply the other half in the same way. This time your scalp should tingle and the eggs should crackle and fluff.

Spray hair and scalp again with hot water and finish the shampoo with a lemon rinse. This shampoo is delightfully cleansing for any head of hair, bleached or otherwise.

FUTURE TRAFFIC PROBLEMS

WHEN SNAKE TAKES TO HIGHWAY

FOR SLUMBER, TRAFFIC STOPS

At least that is what a Sun-Telegraph photographer did on an assignment to Punxsutawney a few days ago. On his return trip to the city, he stopped to investigate what appeared to be a piece of rope on the highway. Instead of rope, he found this five-foot snake, now on the alert at his approach.

WIDER STREETS SEEN AS BIG RELIEF

By SAMUEL THOMAS.

Through careful study regional planning authorities have determined that cities will not have room for future motor traffic even though all street space be utilized to the full extent. Downtown Pittsburgh has an average building height of about four and a quarter stories, but even at this average height the streets are heavily taxed. If the building height average were to be doubled it would be almost impossible to move traffic in this section.

Cities are widening existing pavements by two methods. The first is the cutting back of sidewalks, reducing the pedestrian area and the second is the widening of the entire street through the cutting off of buildings and setting back the building line, such as the recent operations in Pittsburgh.

One of the first steps to be taken in traffic relief is that of making all streets equally desirable for motor travel through the placement of smooth pavements. When this is done traffic can make use of all the street area instead of being confined to a few paved streets. Another plan for cutting congestion is the routing of through traffic around a city instead of compelling it to flow through the congested city streets.

Routes parallel to but separate from the street car lines should be constructed. In entering metropolitan areas the experienced motorist expects a loss of one or two hours proceeding through the few miles of suburban districts. This is a real economic waste which in a few years amounts to the price of a new parallel route.

DODGE SALES ABOVE 1927

Sales of Dodge Brothers passenger cars to consumers in domestic and foreign territories from the first of the year to the week ending June 23 show a gain of 20.2 per cent over the corresponding period of 1927, says Frank D. Saupp, distributor here. A like total of passenger cars delivered last year was not reached until the week ending August 6.

A gain of 67 per cent in retail sales was registered for the week ending June 23 compared to the corresponding week in 1927.

"The 'summer slump" often experienced in the trade appears to be out of the picture as far as Dodge is concerned," said Mr. Saupp. "Dealers throughout the country are optimistic on making continued substantial increases for July and August. Accordingly, we feel certain the second half of this year will surpass production of the first six months, a most unusual situation in automotive building."

BUS ROUTES DOUBLE MILEAGE OF RAILROADS

Dodge Brothers Standard Six is the fastest car, with the fastest pick-up, under a thousand dollars.

HOWEVER

That is only HALF the story. The IMPORTANT point is that this exceptional speed is made practical by Dodge ruggedness of chassis and body construction

OTHERS

Might succeed in building a car at this price with equal SPEED, but to do so successfully they would also have to build a car with equal STURDINESS . . .

AND

That is where Dodge Brothers, with years of experience in building a dependable low-cost product, are years ahead of the field.

YOU

Can buy the Standard Six knowing that it is not only the fastest car in its class but the sturdiest—and the one is every bit as important as the other . .

Hollywood Heralds Little Tales of What Film Stars Are Doing as Local Shows Meet Midweek Tides

Harold Lloyd, Planning New Unsophisticated Youth Role, On Lookout for Leading Lady

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 12.

HAROLD LLOYD begins work within a month, which is news that should gladden the hearts of movie fans. For Harold can always be relied upon to provide an hour of hilarity to which you may safely invite the wife and kiddies. John McDermott, author of many film successes, is now working on the story. It will depict Harold in one of the unsophisticated boy roles, which have proven his strongest forte. No title has as yet been selected. And it isn't probable that one will be chosen for many months to come. Meantime, Harold is looking around for a leading lady. The line has formed on the left.

Lya De Putti is madly enthusiastic over her new picture, "The Scarlet Virgin," which has been completed. And when Lya enthuses the air is full of fireworks. According to Lya this Columbia special gives her greater chances to display her ability than has any picture which she has made in America. To celebrate Lya hurried out and had her new crop of red hair made blande, and now that her locks have completed the cycle maybe she will again turn brunet.

Now that James Cruze has earned the 60,000 bucks he drew down for directing "The Mating Call," there is some speculation as to his next move. It is understood that he has agreed to do the megaphone work on the William Haines film, which will be made after "Alias Jimmy Valentine." Jimmy directed Bill recently in "Excess Baggage." By the way, although Cruze got sixty grand for "The Mating Call," they say that Tommy Meighan's pay envelope contained a little more than twice that sum. Which will buy a lot of golf balls for the games down on Long Island.

Someone started a rumor that Carmel Myers was going abroad to make a picture, and it isn't true. Carmel met producer after producer along the byways of Hollywood and each would say, "Too bad you're going abroad, Carmel, I was counting on you for that big part in my next production." So Carmel missed enough starring parts to keep her busy for a year. However, she finally convinced the home folk that she will stay, and Gotham has grabbed her for "The Girl From Argentine" and "A Modern Sapho"—both "Squeakies."

His friendship with Lina Basquette surely seems to have brought the smiles of fortune along with those of Lina to Peverell Marley, the talented young cameraman who won fame for himself with "The King of Kings," "The Godless Girl," and other De Mille epics. "Pev" is now shooting on "Show Folks," which Paul Stein is directing. After it is completed, "Pev" is going to stick around the lot as an observer, and before the end of the summer is to have a chance to direct "On His Own." All Hollywood is pulling for the good-looking youngster to turn out a winner.

To discard the name of Laemmle when you are in pictures seems almost a sacrilege. Yet that's what Carl Laemmle's niece, Beth, has done. Hereafter she will be know as Beth Harol. Well, a Laemmle by any name will succeed. Especially if she possesses the talent of Miss Harol. She's all signed up with Universal.

ANOTHER JOINS PITT STOCK

In the cast of "The Music Master" this week's offering of the George Sharp Players in the Pitt, is May Buckley, prominent leading woman of a few seasons ago, who joins the company to play character parts.

Frank Elliott, English actor appearing in "The Captive" cast in the Gayety, had his first American part with Blanche Bates in "The Witness for the Defense." He also played with Laurette Taylor in "Delicate Justice" and with Lionel Atwill in "The Outsider."

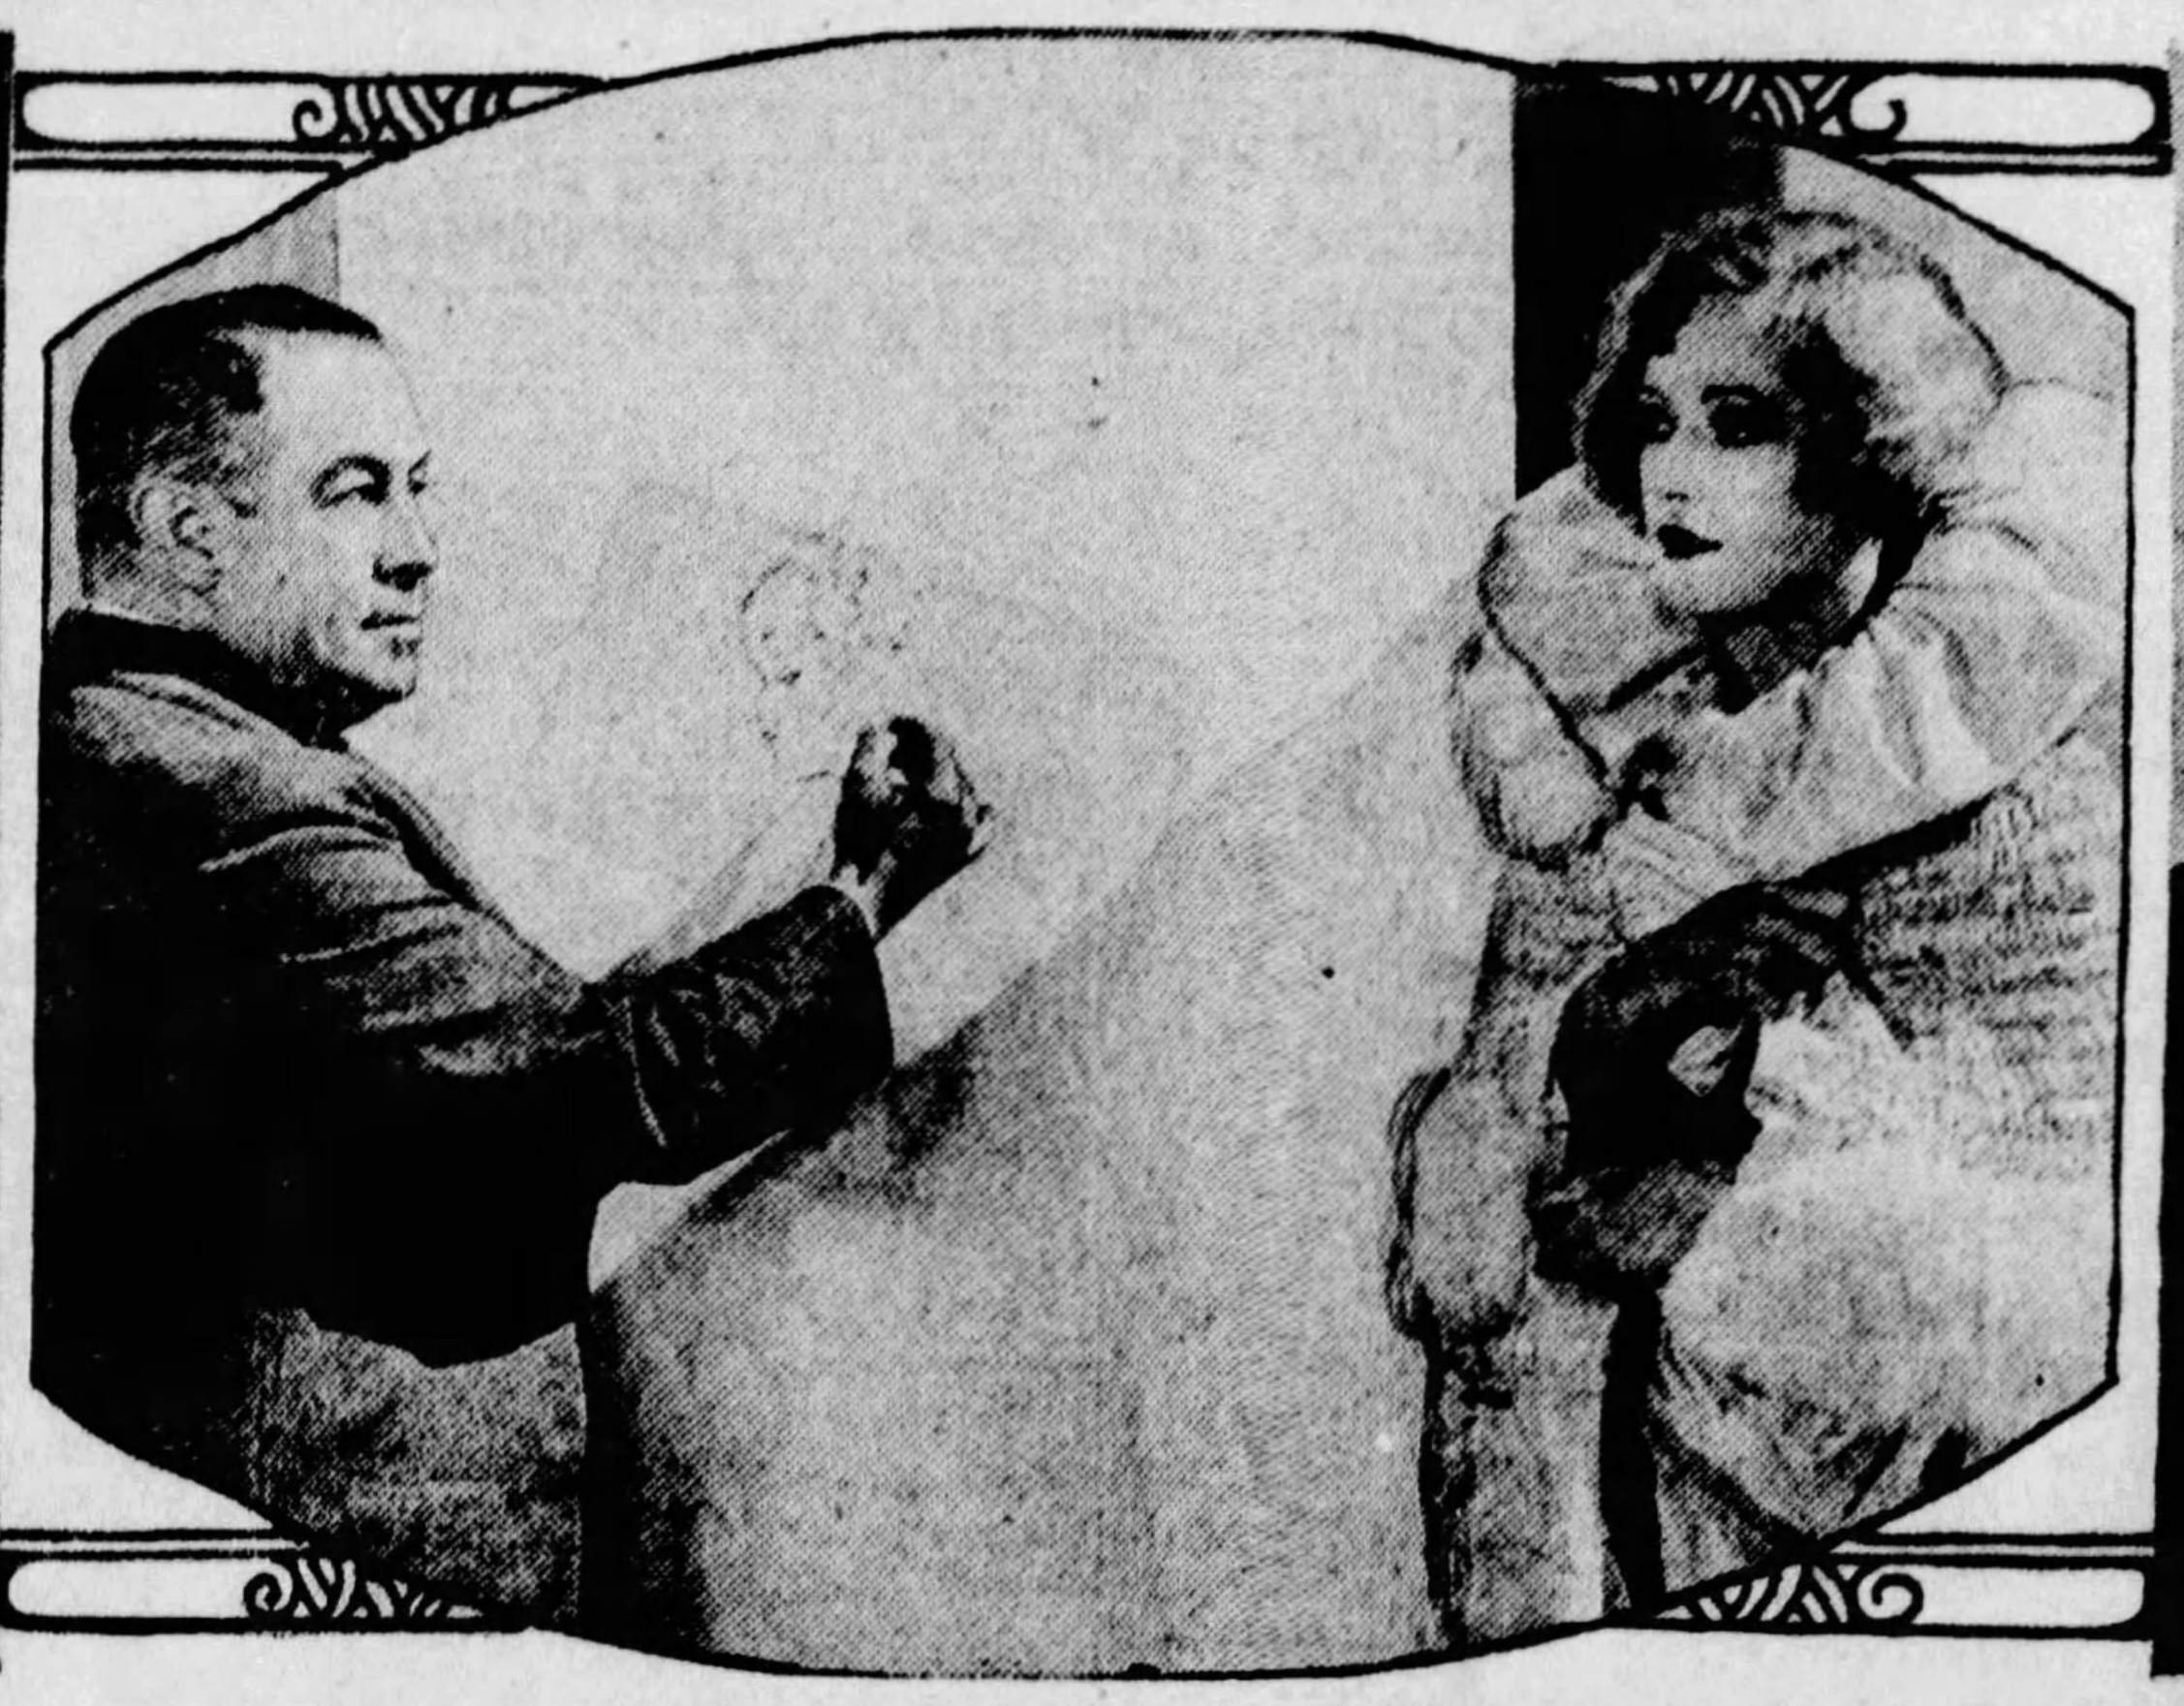
A comedy of social lights and gold-digging chorus girls, "The Best People," by David Gray and Avery Hopwood, will be seen in stock next week, when it is presented by the Nixon Players in the Nixon.

SANDERS TO HAVE EAST END NIGHT

Tonight is to be observed as "East End" night in Sanders, Aspinwall. Dance music will be furnished by Charles Dornberger and his orchestra. Dornberger formerly was a resident of the East End district, before going to New York, where he organized his orchestra.

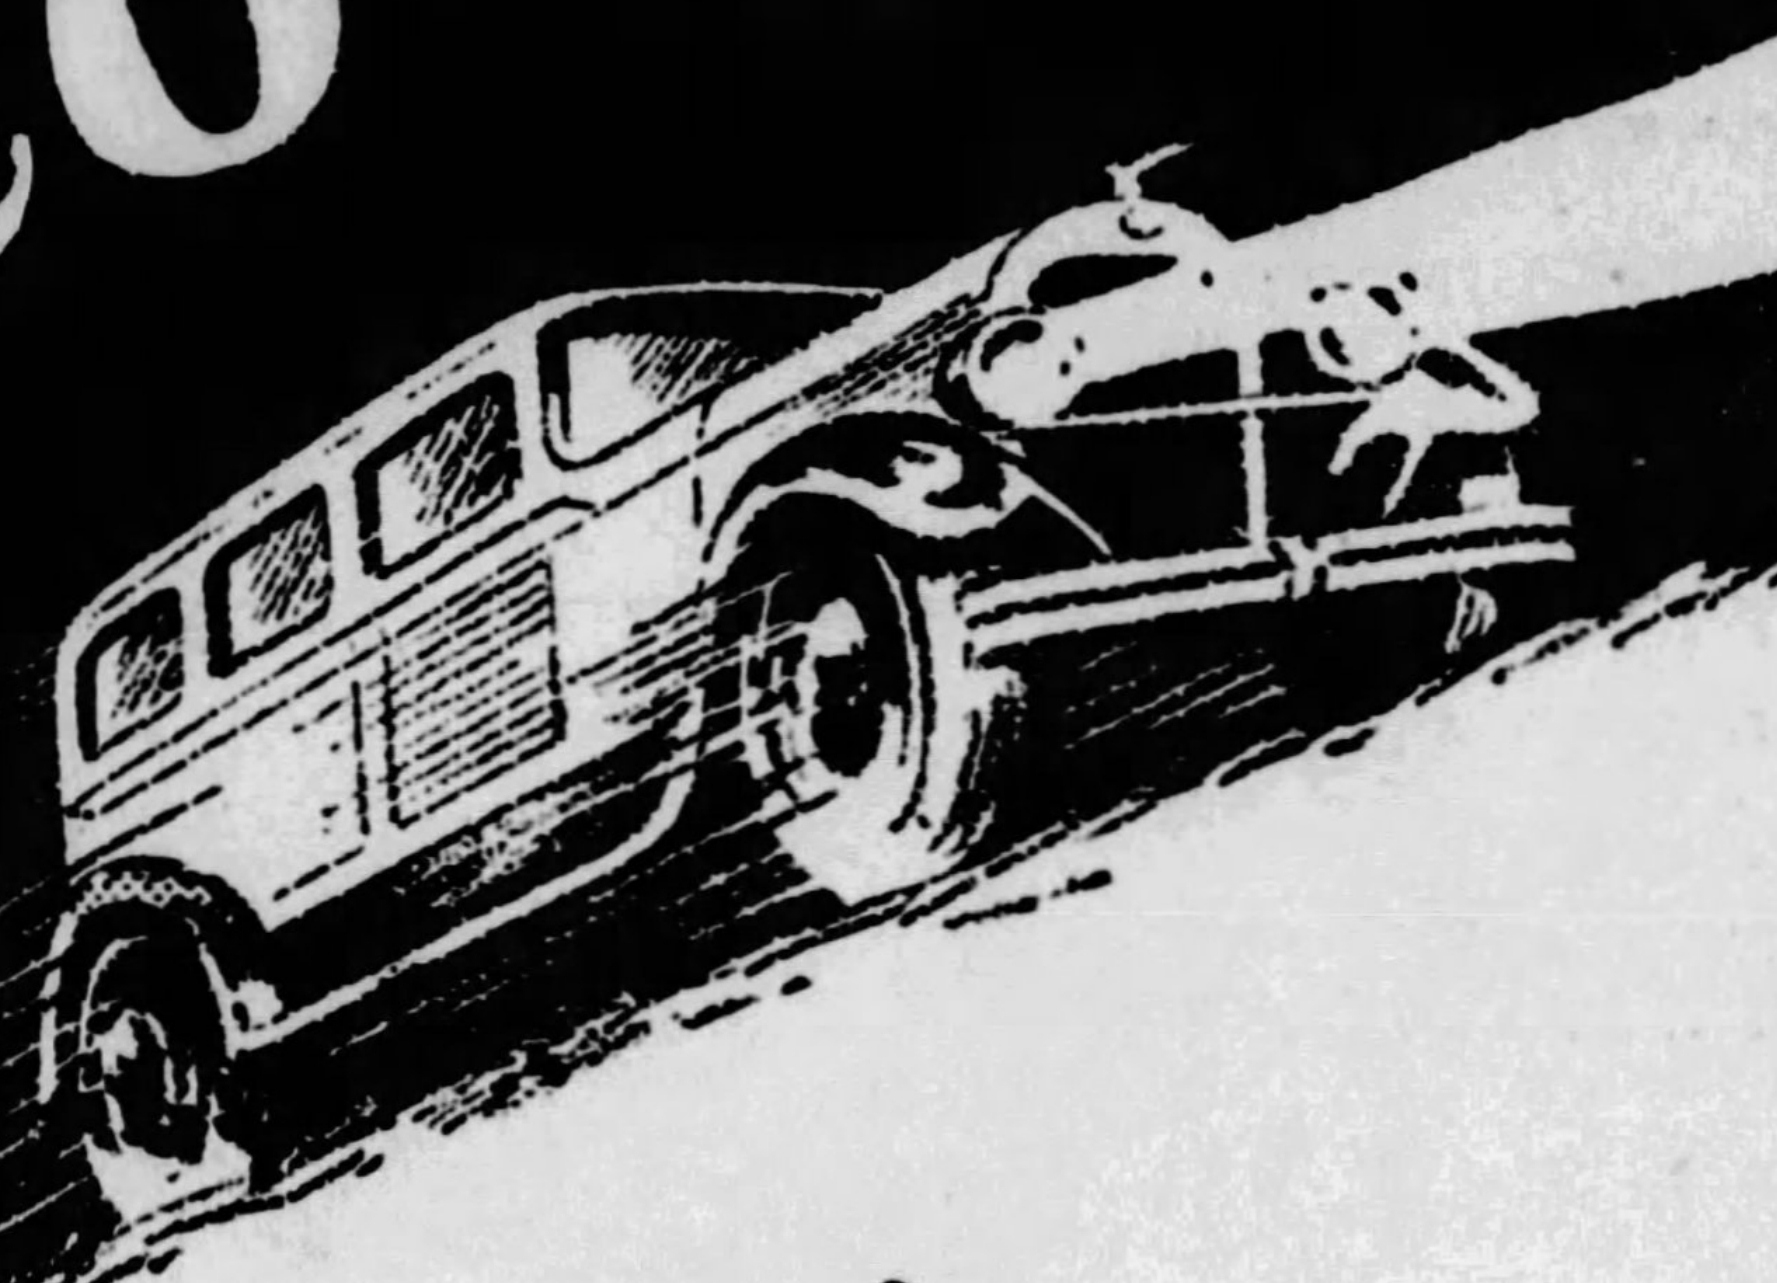
CREATOR OF JIGGS -:- AND MAGGIE -:- VISITS FILM STUDIO

Polly Moran, the Maggie of the M-G-M film version of "Bringing Up Father," seems to be angry with George McManus, creator of the famous comic strip.



Marion Davies, however, appears to find it pleasant to pose for Mr. McManus between scenes of her latest picture, "Her Cardboard Lover." "A Model Model" might be a fitting title for the sketch the artist is making.

Maggie and her umbrella must have made George and his pencil behave, for here we have Miss Moran all smiles, probably expecting to see Maggie made beautiful.



A mile a minute over the top of Uniontown Hill + Studebaker Amoco-Gas!

~and on two of Pittsburgh's "terrors"~

WHEN a Studebaker Commander soared over the top of Uniontown Hill--hitting sixty at the crest--AMOCO-GAS was in the tank!

AMOCO-GAS helped Studebaker make all its sensational records on the speedways--and now AMOCO-GAS has helped Studebaker prove its power, its hill-climbing ability on the toughest hill that could be found. And, the Studebaker-Amoco combination not only went over the top at a new high record mark --but in a further test a Commander Sedan with 14 passengers clinging to it crossed the crest at 31 miles per hour.

There's the final answer to any question which might ever come up as to the hill-climbing ability of the Original Special Motor Fuel.

Pittsburgh is noted for its hills and no two are worse than Negley Avenue--a 16½% grade, and Tokio Street --a 19¼% grade. The Commander crossed the top of Negley Avenue at 28 miles per hour--beating the previous best time of 20 miles per hour. The Commander passed the top of Tokio Street Hill at 30 miles per hour--almost double the previous record.

And AMOCO-GAS was used in these tests, too!

For speed, for power, for pickup, for economy--use AMOCO-GAS!

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Commander Byrd first trained for a seafaring profession but later turned his interests to an aviation career. He has described the dangers of experimental or pioneering flying and the crash of the America, in which he was injured. He explained why so many tragedies occurred in the early days of aviation. During the war he wanted to make an airplane flight across the Atlantic but his chances seemed killed when he was detailed to establish a war unit at Halifax, N. S.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Navigation Assistant in Adventure

CHAPTER X.

ON MY way to Washington I learned to my surprise that the Navy was going to tackle the trans-Atlantic flight after all. The news was enough to play havoc with my reason for the moment. I didn't even stop in Boston to see my people, who were ready to welcome me after my "arduous" war experiences.

The minute I hopped off the train at Washington I rushed right up to the Navy Department to get the latest report. I got two reports. The first, very exciting, was:

"Capt. N. E. Irwin, director of aviation, is recommending to Secretary Daniels that Commander J. H. Towers be placed in command of the trans-Atlantic flight which is to go through at once."

This meant the party was bound to go through. I felt like going out behind the big white building and shouting for joy.

Then I got the second and, to me, crushing report:

"No officer or man who has had foreign duty will be permitted to be a member of the trans-Atlantic flight expedition. This includes those who have been on Canadian detail.

I was stunned. I knew that one motive behind this ruling was to give a chance for excitement to some of the poor devils who had fought the war behind their desks in Washington. A short time at Halifax were to deprive me of realizing my dream.

I confess that the wave of bitterness that struck me over this seeming injustice was almost beyond control. It was some time before I could honestly and coolly say that "after all, the important thing is for an American Navy plane to prove that it can first fly the Atlantic Ocean."

I suppose the blow was greater than I realized at the time. Two days later I came down with influenza bordering on pneumonia. The day after I passed my crisis another officer was brought in and placed beside me.

This was Lieut. Kirkpatrick, Capt. Irwin's aide. "Hello, Dick," he greeted me. "I suppose you know the Captain has just directed your transfer from Washington to duty at the Pensacola Station."

I could scarcely believe my ears. "Is the big flight off?" I gasped. It was the only possible thing, I thought, that could account for such orders.

Surely the authorities could not be so unjust as to ship me away after I had worked for a year on the idea.

"No, I should say not. But the commandant down there has asked for you to come as his aide. You are not available for the NC flying boat on account of your war duty. And I gather you have finished most of the navigational plans. Don't you like Pensacola?"

Feeling as if I should faint I staggered to the telephone and called up Towers. "Do you still want me to help out on the flight?" I asked him weakly.

"Decidedly so," was his prompt reply.

As soon as I had enough strength I went to Capt. Irwin's office and "went to the mat" with him on my Pensacola detail. The captain is a huge man, over six feet, and built like a prizefighter.

I suppose I was a pallid-looking object but in words that were loaded with dynamite—for me. I can't say I won. Rather the captain decided to have a little mercy. My orders were cancelled.

Friend's Plight

Just before I left the hospital an incident occurred that I had good cause to remember later. Near my bed was Lieutenant-Commander Emory Coil, a classmate and close friend of mine, who had been desperately ill with pneumonia.

One morning, when he was so weak that he could still barely lift an arm, I saw him reach for a paper that had been left near him by mistake. He wasn't supposed to read. I heard a groan. Coil had gone even whiter than before. The paper contained an item describing the death of the poor fellow's wife and mother. This was his first knowledge of the catastrophe that had befallen him.

Twice more was the path of my life to cross that of Emory Coil's, each time under the shadow of disaster.

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, gave his final official approval of the trans-Atlantic flight project on February 6, 1919. Eight of us were then formed into what was called the "Trans-Atlantic Flight Section of the Bureau of Aeronautics."

We were in accord on the general plans; but I held out on one point. I did not believe it necessary to put warships every fifty miles along the route. I had had enough experience to believe that the pilots could navigate a straight course without depending on station ships.

At the time there was still no proper instrument to measure the amount the course of plane should be changed to allow for drift. A wind blowing 40 or 50 miles across the course would soon carry a plane far out of line unless her pilot corrected for the error.

This was but one of the problems I had on my hands to solve during the three months left before the planes hopped off.

Red tape was cut at every opportunity. Bureau of Ordnance, Navigation, Construction and Repair, and Operations were all subordinated at times to help us get ready. Such co-ordination runs smoothly enough today. But in 1919 the Aviation Office was still looked upon as an ugly stepchild by the balance of the Navy Department.

Mr. C. B. Trustcott, of Aviation, turned out the final design of drift indicator. The Chemical Section of the Bureau of Ordnance devised bombs and flares. Mr. G. W. Littlehales, of the Hydrographic Office, a methematical genius, evolved for us a short method of navigation. And so on.

By April 21 the trans-Atlantic flight section was moved to the naval air station at Rockaway, Long Island. Two other NC boats had been built. So now we had a group of three, the NC-1, NC-3 and NC-4. The last named was fated to be the first flying machine to cross any ocean on earth.

These NC boats would even today be considered very large craft. In fact, there is no plane in the states today with so great a wing spread. Wing spread of the upper wing was 126 feet. If laid on top of one of our largest Pullman coaches it would extend several feet beyond it.

The overall length of the boat was 63 feet. Each was equipped with four Liberty engines, making a total of 1,600 horsepower, over 30 times the aggregate of the average automobile. I know of no other standard plane today, nine years later, that is more highly powered.

The total weight of an NC boat was 15,100 pounds, including radio. Its weight with full load was about 28,000 pounds, or over five times heavier than the Bellanca monoplane which recently broke the world's endurance record.

Commanded Like Ship

Our economical cruising speed was about 75 land miles per hour. We estimated the cruising radius with full equipment and emergency gear and crew of six men, to be 1,475 miles.

The NC type of flying boat was not a step forward in aeronautical design. It was a whole jump. Such sudden departure in the design of aircraft is rarely wise. But in these ships the Navy had access to the best design brains in the world at the time.

Among them were such men as Glenn Curtis and Naval Constructors Richardson, Westervelt and Hunsaker.

One day 51 men, including the pilots, were crowded into the NC-1 and it was successfully taken into the air!

On May 3, 1919, the three NC flying boats were regularly placed into commission. To the best of my knowledge this was the first time in history a plane had been given official individuality like a ship.

Each plane carried a commanding officer who also navigated, two pilots, a radio operator, an engineer and a reserve pilot engineer.

Commander Towers took command of the NC-3, using it as his flagship. Lieut. Commander P. N. L. Bellinger took the NC-1, Lieut. Commander A. C. Read had the NC-4.

Three better men could not have been selected. Towers was a student, quiet and reserved and methodical; Bellinger a rugged seafaring and a likeable nature; Read, was slender, and uncommunicative, though nothing missed his sharp eyes and quick brain.

As the weeks flew by, a thousand new details of preparation seemed to crop up every day. There were complications with the State Deportment in getting permission to land on foreign soil. Navigational instruments and methods we had evolved had to be given special tests.

We made flights for measurement of fuel consumption. Careful plans were held for communication with the ships that would cover our course. Fuel depots and repair stations were prepared up the coast. Radio tests were made a matter of routine.

On May 8, 1919, we were ready for the first ocean crossing by air in history.

I was to have a taste of the early flight after all. Through the efforts of Towers I was permitted to go with him in the NC-3 to assist in the navigation and look after the navigational instruments in the first two legs of the flight.

Just before we left, several distressing events tended to mar the joy of getting away. On a trial flight with the NC-4 we got back to the beach just as the wires to the up-and-down rudder carried away. Had this happened in the air we should all have been killed.

The day before our departure I heard a scream from a lady visitor to the station. Following her eyes I saw an HS-2 flying boat tail-spinning towards a big gas tank nearby. It crashed squarely into the structure and killed both occupants.

A few hours later Chief Special Mechanic E. H. Howard, engineer of the NC-4, while working around the plane accidentally stuck his arm into the propeller and had his hand cut off at the wrist. He calmly grabbed his arm and walked to Sick Bay.

This series of accidents were said by local pessimists to be a sure

DRY-RAIDED SHERIFFS CRY "POLITICS"

CONNEAUT LAKE, Pa., July 11.—Conflicting versions of the liquor raid made by District Attorney Stuart Culbertson, of Crawford county, upon the Pennsylvania State Sheriffs' convention in the Conneaut Hotel were current today.

Culbertson said:

The raid revealed "wild reveling" on the part of a number of sheriffs attending the convention.

But Sheriff Thomas Sterrett, of Erie county, president of the association, declared:

The raid was "local politics," having no connection with the sheriffs' convention.

RAIDER ASSAULTED

District Attorney Culbertson declared that between 30 and 40 men were present at the liquor party which he and County Detective John L. Laley invaded. Laley was assaulted and bottles were hurled, Culbertson declared, and added that he would have been justified in arresting several sheriffs present for disorderly conduct.

Robert Clark, bell boy, who, the district attorney said, was official bootlegger for the convention, was held for court on a liquor charge. No one else was arrested.

"Everything seems to indicate," said President Sterrett, "that the raid was due to local politics aimed at the sheriff's office of Crawford county. It was most embarrassing to us."

The convention chose Pittsburgh as the next meeting place.

Will Rogers Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 11.

It's been a terrible thing those airship men up north getting lost. But I want to tell you its been pretty near as bad a hardship on us here trying to keep track of the whole thing—who was lost, who was found, who is lost hunting who was lost, who was lost hunting for those that were searching for those who were lost hunting the original rescuers.

That North Pole from what little I can gather is kinder overrated anyhow. If these brave men would devote their time and energy to electing a good Democrat, that wouldn't advance science, but it would help a race of people get some post offices.

Yours for science that pays.

DEMOCRATS BOOM JUDGE THOMSON FOR SENATE

M'NAIR MAY BE SIDETRACKED FOR JURIST

Judge W. H. S. Thomson, who soon will retire from active service as judge of the United States District Court, today would not discuss the report that a movement is afoot to make him the Democratic candidate for United States Senator to oppose Senator David A. Reed.

Attorney William N. McNair, who received the Democratic nomination for Senator without opposition, necessarily would have to withdraw to make a place on the ticket for Judge Thomson. McNair is reported as silent on this phase of the political shift. Should such a plan become a reality, the State Democratic Committee would place the new candidate's name on the ticket.

Prominent Democrats throughout Pennsylvania are said to look with favor on the Judge Thomson candidacy.

SKYWARD

sign of the fatal outcome of our flight.

Off at Last

At 10 a. m. on May 8, 1919, we left the water in the NC-3, with the NC-1 and NC-4 taking position on either side of us. For the first time a division of seaplanes, regularly commissioned, was underway with orders to fly across the Atlantic Ocean.

For the first time in history airplanes were to navigate out of sight of land just as a trans-oceanic steamer must do without land marks to go on. Could we do it? We were flying into the unknown.

The roar of our four engines was terrific. Of course, we were used to it. And we were stimulated by the excitement of being off at last. But I think our attention was riveted more on the thunder of our engines than on any other single factor. Reliable power plants were not so common then as now. And if ours failed we must fail with it.

Towers wrote of this part of the flight:

"Byrd spent the afternoon vibrating between the forward and after cockpits, trying smoke bombs, sextants, etc. My cockpit was not very large, and with all the charts, chart desk, sextants, drift indicator, binoculars, chronometers, etc., stacked in there, very little room was left. As I wore a telephone all the time, wires were trailing all about me, and Byrd and I were continually getting all mixed up like a couple of puppies on leaches. Occasionally one of the pilots would come forward for a cup of coffee and a sandwich, or to take a look at the chart to find out how we were progressing. All these little festivities were rudely broken up about the middle of the afternoon when a squall hit us."

That squall Towers spoke of did not bother us. We headed down through it. Just before it struck us we received a radio from Read saying that the NC-4 was having engine trouble, was running on three engines and would probably have to land.

When Read began to drop astern and descend and Towers thought that the NC-4 was landing close to the destroyer, that had been stationed on our route, we proceeded on our course with the NC-1. The destroyer at the time was still visible to us. However, it turned out later that Read missed it.

As we passed the coast of Newfoundland I was not surprised when Towers wrote me a note saying, "This is fearfully rough air."

I already had been flying around that rocky coast and I had learned there are no rougher air conditions anywhere else in the world.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Smith and Tulliver

By GERALD HUNT

AT the sides of the vaudeville stage, in the two lighted windows used for the announcing of the various acts, the black cardboards, bearing the words in large white letters: "Smith and Tulliver" were sliding down into place.

A responsive murmur ran through the audience that packed the house. "Smith and Tulliver" had been in the vaudeville theaters of Detroit before.

Tulliver, a comic dancer, with a round, humorous face, pranced on the stage first. The audience laughed appreciately at his clowning. He grinned back. He put his whole soul into his dancing. It seemed evident that he enjoyed doing his act.

Then presently Smith, his partner, appeared. She looked scarcely 16, her youth being accentuated by the child's comedy rig she wore. Her hair, light and straight, reached to her shoulders. She wore a blue ribbon to hold it back from her face, which gave her an "Alice in Wonderland" appearance. She was not exactly pretty, but there was something very sincere and appealing in her personality. Her part in the act was largely that of foil for Tulliver, but any critic of dancing could easily discover that she had a humorous, clumsy gracefulness, an almost weird facility in throwing her plump little body about into all sorts of attitudes, a genuine talent that was peculiarly her own.

The applause was generous. The couple on the stage seemed to be having a hilariously good time, and to be sharing it with the spectators. As far as Tommy Tulliver was concerned, this was undoubtedly true. But Anne Smith was acting, acting desperately, guarding her voice and her expression every moment.

As she looked out upon that sea of white uplifted faces, the thought crossed her mind that probably not one person in all that large group even so much as guessed that she was suffering as she had never suffered before, that she was even wishing she might die—

When, in a boisterous bit of horse play, she slapped Tommy's cheek, the gesture was accompanied by the thought: "Oh, I love him so! How can I possibly go on now that—" She jerked herself up. She grinned, she whooped, she screamed with laughter—the audience was delighted with her high spirits.

Still grinning, they automatically took their curtain bows. One, two, three. Three tonight! Anne counted them. She had done so after the act for so long that it had become a habit she did not shake off even under the stress of emotion.

In the wings, Tommy held out his hand to her. Their work for the evening was over, as was their present engagement in Detroit.

"I'm going to take the eleven-thirty train tonight for Cleveland," he explained. "So I won't be seeing you again until after—" he smiled happily.

"And the wedding is next Monday?" she asked, with a wavering smile. He nodded. "Well, I sure wish you all happiness, kid!" she declared, trying to speak gaily. "Give my best wishes to the bride."

"And don't forget," Tommy warned, "I'm meeting you in Buffalo on the tenth of next month. Be sure to get there on the tenth. Our engagement begins the matinee of the eleventh, but I think we'll need a little time to brush up and get back into harness, don't you? We need a few new jokes, good ones—"

He squeezed her hand. Anne was glad that her face was shielded from the glaring light.

"See you at the Chester Hotel, kid," he said. "On the tenth. So long!"

"So long, Tommy . . ." he dashed out, too hurried and too happy to hear the catch in her voice.

In the dressing room, Anne changed into her street clothes. She moved dazedly, mechanically. Because of an old habit of going to some little restaurant after the last show for a bite to eat, she proceeded to do so, without even thinking what she was doing.

It was only when she was sitting at a bare white-topped table with a cup of coffee and a sandwich in front of her that she gave a start. It seemed so strange for Tommy not to be sitting opposite her, grinning, talking about the amount of applause they had received, or how they could build up their act.

The team of "Smith and Tulliver" had been in existence for over two years.

"Funny—" Anne mused, "all that time—and he never guessed how I loved him."

She sipped her coffee, hoping she wasn't going to cry right in front of the half dozen people who were eating there.

"I'll have to let him know, write him right away, if I decide to pull out," she was thinking. "He'd have to get somebody else, and that would take a long time. The only fair thing would be to let him know right away—"

She wondered what excuse she could give for breaking up the team. It had been successful, they had plenty of bookings ahead . . . What could she say to Tommy?

Anne remembered now, from the very first, she had not been ambitious for herself, but for Tommy. His greatest dream was to attain to the Orpheum Circuit, but Anne's dreaming went far beyond that. . . . She saw him as the featured dancer of a celebrated troupe touring the world.

She could not dodge the realization that if she withdrew from the team, Tommy might very likely get another partner, who would not care about his future to make him work hard. Tommy was ambitious, but sometimes he was lazy too. Anne had always been able to manage him so nicely. She sighed.

Could she keep on? Work with a Tommy who was married to someone, who loved someone? Work, and never let him suspect that he meant everything in the world to her? It would be terribly hard, so much harder than it had been to go on hoping, always hoping that some day Tommy would feel toward her as she felt toward him.

But, at last, there would always be that shining day to look forward to — that day when the name of "Tulliver" would stand for worthwhile achievement in the world of art. For Anne felt an unshakeable conviction that Tommy would and could be great. Then, there would be no "Smith and Tulliver"—that is, people would think it was just "Tulliver," and yet, all the time, it really would be "Smith and Tulliver," just the same as it is now.

They were beginning to close up the restaurant. Anne paid her check at the desk near the entrance. Then she went out almost happy, now that she had made her decision not to break up the team.

As she walked along the brightly lighted downtown street she tried to imagine just how the name "Tulliver" would look in one of those big electric signs against the sky.

NAB DRIVERS AS RUM RUNNERS

Drivers of two automobiles were arrested in different parts of the city by Federal agents last night. John P. Cronin, 35, of 88 Forty-fifth street was reported taken into custoday at Twenty-seventh street and Spring way at midnight. Agents say 11 five-gallon cans of moonshine were found in the machine. The other automobile stopped was said to have been transporting 140 pints of home brew. Matthew Aiela, of 636 Thompson street, and Salvatore Cerniglia, of 403 Larimer avenue, were said to have been in the car. The machine was halted at Frankstown and Paulson avenues.

STEEL WORKER KILLED BY FALL FROM CAR

Jerusalem's Population in Christ's Time

IT IS believed that Jerusalem's population in Christ's time was between 60,000 and 70,000. Three hundred years before a Greek historian computed it to be 120,000. The present population is about 64,000.

Bob Goes to See Java Dick And Falls Into a Trap Set by Tao Lin

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley is picked up by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after 30 years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. Bob finds Java Dick in Singapore, who promises his help in solving the mystery. The Idol contains the key to a great fortune. Bob hears the story of Hsi Yan's fight with his and receives the other Idol which containus the key to the cypher. Bob translates the cypher and then destroys it. Capt. Scarface makes his appearance on the scene and tells Bob the story of his uncle's death. Verna Lyle is with Scarface and Bob goes to see her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

UP and down the deck he paecd. A schooner put out to sea. Subconsciously, he noted it—Capt. Scarface, of course. It began to grow dark. Still he paced the deck—battling against the temptation, the urge of every fiber of his body to order a boat away and go ashore and seek her out.

He wanted to see those blue eyes meet his without the loathing in them that had been his portion until now; he wanted to see a smile on those lips that had never yet smiled for him; he wanted to stand before her as a man free to plead his cause. He wanted—God, with all his soul!—he wanted her! But he could not go. He must not go. Not yet! Not now! It was too dangerous—for her. They, Chen-shu and the others, did not know that she was in Singapore. But, though they had made no move all day, they might be watching him, Bob Kingsley. And in that case to go to her would be to betray her presence to them. True, they knew she no longer had one of the idols, and, as he had told Capt. Scarface, he did not think she was any longer in danger on that account; but there was no telling what Chen-shu, beaten so far at every turn and looking for revenge, might do, if given an opening, to one whom he had called his, Bob Kingsley's, "beloved."

"Beloved!" Bob Kingsley's lips shaped the word softly—and he smiled out into the darkness that had completely fallen now.

And then suddenly the faint swish of oats close alongside attracted his attention. Who was it this time? Was something breaking at last? He had been hoping some word would come from Java Dick. He stepped to the rail and peered overside. Yes, that's who it was! Not Java Dick in person; but—he could just make out the man as the other stood up in the boat—Tao Lin.

"Hello, Tao Lin!" he said.

"Hello, Black Bob!" Tao Lin answered. "I could not come until it was dark for fear it might be known that one from Java Dick had been sent to you. Java Dick is awiting at his place. He has found out what you wanted to know."

"Right!" exclaimed Bob Kingsley eagerly. "Shall I go with you, or in my own boat?"

"It would be better to take your own boat, Black Bob," Tao Lin replied; "for it would not be well if we should be seen together; and, also, you will want the boat for your return. The boatmen are all robbers. Why should you pay their thieves' price?"

"Right!" said Bob Kingsley again—and five minutes later he was rowing shorewards.

Tao Lin was already back at his ironing board and the ubiquitous shirt when Bob Kingsley entered Java Dick's.

"Black Bob has come quickly," smiled Tao Lin in greeting. "He is but a minute behind me."

"I wouldn't be likely to waste any time under the circumstances," Bob Kingsley smiled in return. "Where's Java?"

"He waits," answered Tao Lin. "He is in his room that no one enters but himself, and where it will not be known that he talks with Black Bob." Tao Lin turned, and reached out his hand, pressing it against the wall. "See!" A door behind the ironing-board, that Bob Kingsley had not known existed, opened, or, rather, seemed to slide back and disappear in the wall itself—and what appeared to be an unlighted passage was disclosed. "Hurry, please, Black Bob," Tao Lin went on quickly. "It would be an evil day for me if any one entered from the alleyway as you have entered and saw what you now see. The door of Java Dick's room is just inside and at your left hand."

Bob Kingsley stepped briskly through into the passage—and then a prescience of danger sweeping suddenly upon him, he swung sharply around to go back again. Too late! The sliding door closed swiftly before him, and he found himself standing in utter darkness. He heard a rush of slippered feet, the swish of garments. An invisible hand was at his throat. He tore it savagely away. It came again. Other hands clawed at him and fastened themselves upon his arms. He struck out blindly with one hand, as he tried to wrench his revolver from his pocket with the other—but the weapon was snatched from him even before he had it free. And now he struggled madly—struggled with the fury of desperation—struggled futilely. He was in the center of a ring of snarling, panting humans packed so close around him that he could scarcely move; his hands and arms held so tightly that he could no longer strike a blow. And then, of a sudden, his feet were jerked from under him, and he was lifted up bodily in the arms of his captors. The next instant the door of a lighted room was opened, and he was catapulted headlong through the doorway. He struck with his face upon the floor. The door closed. He sat up, and, dazed for a moment, rubbed his hand back and forth across his eyes. It had been quickly done, the whole affair could not have lasted more than a minute, and now he was alone—they had thrown him in here as they would have thrown a sack of meal. He laughed harshly. No they would have been more careful with the meal; the sack might have broken open, and—

His laugh died away. He was staring in startled fascination now straight in front of him. On a stool near the wall, and almost within arm's reach of him, were the two little ivory gods. Both pairs of folded hands had been removed, and these, together with two small slips of paper whose identity was apparent at a glance, were spread out in front of the idols.

The East at its deviltry! Premonitory! Ugly with significance! His jaws clamped hard together. He quite understood the mute threat—the mute promise of uglier things to come—the insidious opportunity that was thus thrust upon him for a period of contemplation obviously intended to break his nerve and turn him to putty in their hands! A sort of "third degree!" He was trapped. Java Dick had trapped him. Java Dick! His lips twisted ironically. He had selected Java Dick as an ally! Well, in consequence, he was in a hole—in rather a bit of a tight hole!

He rose to his feet, and looked around him. The room was lighted though none too brilliantly, by a large lamp that hung from the center of the ceiling. There were no windows; and no furnishings of any description, with the single exception of the stool that held the ivory gods. Not very inviting even for a prison cell!

His eyes reverted to the little idols—but he stared at them now from under heavily furrowed brows. They seemed to invoke an entirely new interest in themselves with a new significance. How, precisely, had they got here? That question opened a very wide field for mental exploration if he cared to exploit it. Did it mean that Mindar Singh and Java Dick were in collusion? It looked that way now. He remembered Java Dick's insistent, but craftily guarded attempts to induce him, Bob Kingsley, to return to this dive here last night after he had admitted having one of the idols at that moment on his person. And then, Java Dick having failed in that particular, he remembered that Java Dick had introduced the name of Mindar Singh, intimating that Chen-shu was combing every den and joint in the hopes of laying violent hands upon the East Indian. That was probably a lie. It was much more likely that Java Dick had been crafty and cunning enough to invent what he had said on the spur of the moment, and then, with their heads together, Mindar Singh and Java Dick had concocted the corroborative details in the tale that Mindar Singh had brought to the Alita. But where had the other idol come from that Mindar Singh had brought with him to the schooner? How had Chen-shu lost it? What had become of Chen-shu?

Marry in Your Own Circle to Be Happy, Says Fay King

THE CHANCES FOR LASTING HAPPINESS ARE BETTER WITH ONE IN YOUR OWN WORLD
FAY KING

By FAY KING

TODAY'S freedom brings together youth from all walks of life.

For friendship, inspiration, and better understanding,

But for happiness in marriage, the chances are best for young persons of the same world.

Ill-matched romance is apt to enjoy and welcome the test that defies the wishes of parents and the opinion of friends, glorying in the fact that love has weathered the big storm.

But it is the little domestic whirlwinds that blow a grain of dust into the eye and spoil the outlook of rose-colored glasses.

It's the little difference that makes the big difference between worlds.

It's hard to pull together from different directions!

Distinctive Trimming

I saw an interesting trimming on a tailored blue serge frock the other day. It was a border of printed linen, the design being in blue on a white ground, and it was used as collar, cuffs and outline of a surplice blouse. It added just that touch of individuality to the garment that was needed to make it distinctive.

Kent Rossiter Is Elected District Attorney and Starts to Clean Up

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and Kitten are daughters of a worker in the Rossiter factory. Both are prevented by poverty from mingling with the socially elect of the little town. Emily had made an ideal of Kent Rossiter. Mary Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is devoted to her. Mrs. Frances Haiden, a wealthy interior decorator, takes an interest in her. She gets a job with Mrs. Haiden. Kitten, Emily's sister, is going with a wild crowd and is running close to danger. Emily goes into partnership with Mrs. Haiden, Stella tells danger. Emily goes into partnership with Mrs. Haiden. Stella and Skeets are married. Kingdon Cole grows indifferent toward Emily and Frances tells her he is a gold digger.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

AND Wentworth Rossiter coming to offer help when her father died, actually proposing to pension her mother, though they had no claim on him. Would he have done that had he been the sort of man her father considered him?

Why, of course not! And, since she knew two so fine as these she'd not grow cynical because another, Kingdon Coles, was what he was.

She laughed all at once, a free, merry sound, and began to race with Raggedy along the cote d'or. Kingdon Coles! How lucky she was—how very lucky! Supposing she had married him before she found out—Coles who would love his wife and her fortune equally well!

There was a name for girls who did such things; it would fit him all right she guessed maybe. Gold-digger. A male gold-digger. And she might have married him!

"Gee, dog," she called, happily. "We're the lucky ones, you and I!"

CHAPTER XLI.

EMILY was astonished at how little she missed Kingdon Coles.

"So I didn't even like him much," she told herself. "I was flattered, maybe. And that would be a sad thing to build a marriage on—vanity—even if he had been different. I supposed everything that happens is for the best."

Still the experience coming to her through him was not a pleasant one. She accepted it and was grateful but it left her rather subdued. She felt, someway, as if she had grown up suddenly because of it.

Election day grew near and feeling ran high in Lyall, but she watched it as one who stands upon a bank looks at the current of a turbulent river. Though Kitten went here and there to hear campaign speeches, Emily couldn't stir her own interest. Once when she had an errand at the Yacht Club and Kent was making an address in the ballroom, she didn't even stop to listen.

And she wouldn't vote.

"It's your duty, my dear," Frances told her. "Every citizen owes that much to the government."

"One vote won't make any difference. Besides it doesn't matter who gets in, does it?"

Election night the town went wild. There was a parade in which women joined with horns and tin pans and torches. They marched up and down the River road and out Main street and Emily heard their shouts and saw the red, exciting lights of their flares far down the hill.

But she went to bed early without telephoning for the returns.

It occurred to her, as she stood before the mirror, that she was growing rather thin. And her cheeks were not as pink as they had been.

She heard, in the morning, that Kent was elected. A tingle shot through her in spite of her lassitude. "He deserves everything," she told herself. "No one so fine."

But she did not clip the interview in which he thanked the voters. She read it, smiling and proud, but the thought of cutting it from the newspaper did not, for some reason move her. Perhaps the Kingdon Coles episode made her feel that she must put away some of her enthusiasms. At any rate she wrapped up the Japanese box that evening, and stored it in the attic, together with the blue dress of sad memory and the now outdated calendars Frances had given her.

In the interview Kent was quoted as saying things about a "house-cleaning policy." The article in the Item declared that twenty or more speakeasies in the county, ranging all the way from informal bars at the back of obscure business places to elaborate roadhouses, must prepare to close.

Frances smiled at this. "It looks as if the Judge had created a Frankenstein," she remarked.

Once again snow lay, like a mantle of ermine, upon Lyall. For a brief time the town awoke to color as merchants hung their stores with green and red and lights of many hues were strung through Main street.

Every window, on The Hill as on the River Road, held an evergreen wreath and candles were set ablaze to illumine the way of the new-born Christ child.

Waits flitted from street to street, their voices blending graciously in "Silent Night." And all the bells flung ecstacy into the Christmas sky. . . .

The holiday was celebrated quietly in the Day home. Greens carried to the grave up the hill; little fancy cakes and Jasmine tea; mysterious packages tied with bright ribbon passed about, opened with exclamations of delight.

Frances invited Emily to a party in the evening but she declined. She had no wish to go out these days.

Shortly it was the first of the year and the papers began to refer to the new District Attorney, Mr. Kent Rossiter. Emily pored over the columns.

Kent, it appeared, had started right out to make good on his promise of political house-cleaning. He began by directing a raid on a roadhouse up the State Highway one night.

This resulted in the arrest of the proprietor and the place's closed doors.

And in a statement which the Item printed with a flourish he declared it to be only the beginning.

Presently the Star commenced to refer to him as "Galahad." Or, more often, as "Gal" Rossiter.

Meditating upon this in an idle hour at the shop, Emily saw the two who had talked so forcefully to the Judge the day the Item first proposed Kent for office meet and pass up the stairs across the street.

"Who are they, Frances?"

"Henchmen. I suppose they're worried now the Frankenstein shows signs of turning."

"You mean about the roadhouse? Didn't they want it closed?"

Frances looked at her queerly and didn't answer.

Marty wandered over later and leaned his elbows on a bolt of yellow silk, gazing at it in a puzzled way. Emily ventured to mention the raid.

"It must have been exciting. Kent is doing just what he promised."

"And riding for a fall. There's a limit to the grandstand stuff." Still young, Marty was; he had yet to learn silence.

"But the District Attorney is expected to enforce the law, isn't he?"

"So's your Aunt Kate." With that he drifted away, leaving her thoughtful.

Kent had done what was right and now Marty, speaking for the ring, said he was "riding for a fall." Kent had declared he was going on in the way he had begun and they were determined he should not.

She could not guess at the reason behind this; she was completely ignorant of political intrigue. But she was discerning enough to recognize treachery and honest enough to feel outraged.

Would Kent know about it? Probably he trusted these men who were ready to play him false.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

Bucs Have Played More Games With Strong Teams and Fewer With Weaker Ones Than Any Rival—Fans Regret Going of Miljus But Realize He Could Not Win Here.

ONE powerful agency has proved a heavy handicap to the Pittsburgh club in the first half of the National League pennant race, but has been generally overlooked by those who preferred to circulate fake stories about dissension, etc., instead of searching for real baseball reasons to explain the below-par showing of the Pirates.

John McGraw.

That agency is the schedule. A study of the senior league slate will show that Barney Dreyfuss, the master schedule builder of the country, but who asked to be relieved of the work last winter, took the worst of it without a whimper when he sat in by invitation at the meeting of the major program committees here and declined to offer any suggestions.

OF course, a schedule will even up in the course of a full season, but for part of the campaign it may help one or more clubs and work a hardship upon others. The Bucs have been the chief sufferers in the present case.

The schedule was drawn up by President John A. Heydler of the National League. He is one of the fairest and most just officials in the history of baseball, but his inexperience in schedule-making, despite all of his efforts to be strictly impartial appears to have caused him to handicap the Corsairs in a way that may have had considerable to do with the team's failure to make a better showing.

Joe McCarthy

CONSIDER the number of times each club has been called upon to meet the two kinds of opposition in the league, for instance—the tough and the soft. If the playing dates had been distributed equally all around the present standing of the various clubs could be accepted as an indication of their true worth, but as it is the competition has not been even.

The Pirates have played more games against the strong teams and fewer against the weaker ones than any other club in the league, whereas the schedule has been unusually favorable to the teams that were listed at the beginning as dangerous flag contenders, particularly those headed by John McGraw in New York and by Joe McCarthy in Chicago.

HERE'S a sample of what the Bucs have been up against: They have played against first division clubs in no fewer than 57 of their 76 games to date. It follows that only 19 of their games have been played against second division clubs. On the other hand, the Giants have played only 22 games against first division clubs (little more than one-third of Pittsburgh's total), and they have been privileged to meet the weaker outfits of the second division on 51 occasions. Chicago has played only 37 against the first four clubs and 45

BUCCOS WIN FOURTH IN ROW; TOP PHILS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

FLASHES of the form against the Phils yesterday that made him the ranking pitcher of the National League in the past two seasons indicate that Remy Kremer will be of more value to the Pirates in the last half of the National League race.

The Buccos, as they clash with the Quakers this afternoon, will reach the half-way mark of the long competition. In other words they are staging their seventy-seventh battle of the 154-game chase.

Kremer yesterday scored a 6-to-5 victory over the Phillies and while he was solved quite frequently, he behaved in such a manner at one critical moment to remind fans of his best self in his fat years.

The crisis came in the eighth when, with the game knotted, the Phillies filled up the bases with none out through some loose work among the Pirate first defense men. Kremer, however, had no argument as to how the bases became crowded—there they were and it was up to him to get out of the jam which he did, valiantly and cleverly.

GETS OUT OF HOLE

The first batter to face him was Thirdbaseman Whitney, a newcomer who has been cutting quite a swath in National League circles, especially with the timeliness of his hits. Kremer fanned the youngster.

Heinie Sand, who generally is troublesome to the Pirates, was next. Frenchy caused Heinie to hoist a little fly to Brother Paul and the runners were held to their sacks. Catcher Lerian, another recruit with a punch, came up and jockeyed with Remy until the count was three balls and two strikes. In the extremely delicate situation, the Pirate pitcher fanned the Quaker receiver, thus keeping his team on an even footing with the invaders.

Heroics were spilled all over the field in the ninth inning when the Pirates copped, despite the fact that they went into the final frame with a one-run deficit.

Jimmy Ring, who pitched a beautiful game of ball in the sweltering afternoon, was the principal casualty at the finish. Ring opened the ninth for his club by nicking his slab rival for a clean hit. Jimmy moved ahead on Southern's sacrifice, took third on Fresco Thompson's single and counted on Hurst's long fly.

Ring appeared to be tiring as he went out to face the determined Pirate attack of the ninth. Hargreaves was erased, but Fred Brickell, batting for Kremer, drew a pass and Adams came through with a timely single to right that sent Brick to third.

RING WEAKENS

Poor Jimmy—tired and weak from the heat moved out to make way for Lefty Sweetland, the latter being summoned to pitch to the Waner boys, who are as bad as Dangerous Dan McGrew. Sprout the

MORGAN TO RISK TITLE TONIGHT

NEW YORK, July 11.—(AP.)—Tod Morgan, Seattle junior lightweight champion, rules a 6-to-5 favorite to retain his crown in his scheduled 15-round titular battle with Cannonball Eddie Martin at Ebbets Field tonight.

Most of the speculation in boxing circles had to do rather with whether the weather would permit the boxers to go through with their engagement. The battle, a return affair, has been called off on three occasions.

YOUTHS VIE FOR HONORS IN THE SUN-TELEGRAPH TOURNAMENT AT SCHENLEY PARK TOMORROW

Above are eight of the entrants in the record-breaking field of players who will compete in The Sun-Telegraph's free tournament for junior and sub-junior golfers to be played over the Schenley Park public links tomorrow, along with their inspiration, the incomparable Bobby Jones, who was the original golf prodigy, and a picture of the William Randolph Hearst handsome bronze trophy, which goes to the winner, along with a solid gold medal and an inscribed iron club. Seventeen prizes in all will be awarded.

BIG FIELD IN GREAT GOLFING EVENT

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

WITH 661 eligible players in the fold, and several pending besides, The Sun-Telegraph's first annual free amateur junior West Penn golf tournament, for the William Randolph Hearst trophy, which is to be played tomorrow over the municipal links in Schenley Park, marks a new era in the game of golf. No larger junior competition ever has been held in the history of the game in this or any other country—mark that down in your little booklet.

John Jay Burke.

The play will be at 18 holes medal, with the boys competing in foursomes. The first quartet will tee off at 5:45 o'clock, Eastern Daylight Saving Time—not standard time—and the laddies in quest of the 17 beautiful prizes will continue to start at intervals of four minutes until the entire field is on the course.

John Jay Burke, executive committeeman of the public links section, United States Golf Association, will drive the first ball down the fairway promptly at 5:45 o'clock, marking the official start of The Sun-Telegraph's effort to find a second Bobby Jones in the tri-state district as well as the materialization of its promotion of the encouragement of competition among junior golfers.

PLANS COMPLETE

Every arrangement is now complete. Everything else is up to the boys themselves.

It might be well for the boys to take a look at the caddie situation the tournament will cause, and bring their own with them. Andy Petrolia, Schenley Park's popular caddie master, will have a number of caddies on hand, but hardly enough to go around in such an enormous field.

All entrants will report to the desks marked "Junior Class" or "Sub-Junior Class" to register and receive their contestants' ribbon in plenty of time before they are called upon to tee off. Each boy will have to keep the card of one of the other boys in the foursome; no player will be permitted to keep

17 Prizes For Golf Play

SEVENTEEN prizes in all will be awarded the winners in The Sun-Telegraph William Randolph Hearst junior and sub-junior West Penn amateur golf tournament, which will be played over the Schenley Park Public Links tomorrow.

The competition will be at 18 holes medal play and the winner (maker of low score, whether junior or a sub-junior) will receive three prizes, first, the beautiful William Randolph Hearst bronze trophy, of a golfer standing 18¼ inches high; second, a 14-karat solid gold medal, and third, an inscribed iron club. Thus he will have a trophy for his home, a medal for his watch chain or fob, and a useful article for the links, a good club of standard make.

Winner of first place in the division other than the one that carries off the trophy gets two prizes, a 14-karat solid gold medal and an inscribed iron club.

Winner of second place in each division gets a 14-karat gold filled medal and an iron club, winner of third place in each a sterling silver medal and an iron club and winner of fourth place in each division a sterling silver medal. The player in each division who turns in high score will receive a sterling silver medal as a consolation prize, so that it will pay all players to continue to the finish regardless of any tough breaks they may encounter.

Following is a complete list of the 17 fine prizes that await the record-breaking field of 651 entries:

PIRATES

younger slapped a single to right, scoring Brickell and tying the score. Adams stopped at second, but when Brother Paul spanked the ball to center, Sparky rode home with the winning marker.

Our new catcher put us right into the battle in the sixth game when he deftly cleaned off the sacks with a peach of a double to the scoreboard after two were out. A little loose play by the Quakers allowed the Pirates to fill up the runways with two removed and Sir Charles surely did tally the three Buccos with his pretty smash. It was the fourth straight victory for the Buskwhackers.

Ervin Brame and Ray Benge are the slab selections for today.

FINAL LEGION FRAY CARDED FOR SATURDAY

The final game of the American Legion baseball elimination tournament will be played Saturday at Forbes Field immediately after the finish of the contest between the Pirates and Braves.

The management of the Pirates has donated the use of the field and the players of both clubs will be guests of the management at the big league battle. The contending nines are the Phonix Club and the Liberty Auto outfit of McKeesport.

Flinn Loses By 9 and 7

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

W. C. FOWNES, JR., of Oakmont, and J. W. Crookston, of Stanton Heights, advanced to the final round in the Pennsylvania state amateur golf tournament at Oakmont today.

Fownes played consistently brilliant golf in his semi-final round match with George Flinn, of Fox Chapel, equaling par on almost every hole to win by the overwhelming margin of 9 and 7. Flinn, wild with both wood and iron, played from trap to trap, having only two holes and winning none. He was 7 down at the turn. Their cards:

CROOKSTON EXTENDED

Jimmy Crookston encountered much more difficulty in slipping into the title round, H. C. Fownes II putting up a stubborn battle before going down by 2 up. Fownes, playing superbly on one hole only to fall to mediocrity on the next, was 2 down at the turn. On the incoming nine he staged a brief rally, but a buzzard 6 at the par 3 thirteenth so unnerved him that he never fully recovered.

On the "unlucky" thirteenth, Fownes' iron from the tee found the rough, his second landed in a trap and his explosion shot failed to reach the green. Crookston, meanwhile, had placed his tee shot on the green and was down in the orthodox two putts.

U. S. OLYMPIC TEAM SAILS

NEW YORK, July 11.—(AP.)—To the accompaniment of the blaring of bands, blowing of whistles and expressions of optimism from all hands, the American Olympic team sailed at noon today aboard the chartered steamship President Roosevelt, for the games at Amsterdam.

The big liner, bedecked with the flags of all nations and with the words, "American Olympic Team" painted on it in letters 50 feet high, was accompanied down the bay by the municipal tug, Macom. Its departure was the occasion of a tremendous ovation. Thousands were massed on the pier and other places of vantage and cheered the athletes to the echo as they sailed, waving their farewells.

Johnny Gibson, the 400-meter hurdling star, had his own personal band. It was provided by his home club, the Bloomfield, N. J., Catholic Lyceum, in the colors of which he won his place on the team.

Charley Paddock, storm-center of an eleventh-hour controversy, which threatened to disqualify him on grounds of professionalism because of his appearance in a motion picture, went aboard just before the boat sailed and was given a big hand.

his own score. So it might be well to brush up on those rules.

Come dressed for the event, and bring your own clubs. Al McBride, Schenley's pro. who is also going to settle any controversies on the rules, has a limited number of sets of clubs which may be rented for the tournament. See him early if you want a set.

Frank Petrolia has lowered his restaurant prices for the benefit of the boys, also.

Above all things remember to observe the etiquette of the game of golf—and any boy found to be acting in any way but gentlemanly will be ruled off of the course. If you lose a ball, don't hold up the field while you are hunting it; let the foursome behind you go through.

Let's make this one great big party! Every one on the level, and every one a good score.

Following the check-up on the scores, which is a very necessary thing, the winners of the prizes will be the guests of The Sun-Telegraph at a luncheon or dinner one day next week, at which time they will be awarded.

Fait Elkins Turns Canuck for Olympics

NEW YORK, July 11.—(INS.)—Fait Elkins, Nebraska Indian, and all-around athlete, has discovered that he is a Canadian, if he cares to be, and as a result will compete for the Dominion in the Olympic games at Amsterdam.

Elkins tore a muscle in the trials for the United States Olympic team and was not selected to sail with the team today. His two years' army service with Canada, however, made him eligible to sport the Maple Leaf, and he will compete against his old friends at Amsterdam.

FELT HOPELESS; NOW WELL AGAIN

Local Motorman Uses Ten Herbs With Remarkable Results; Feels Like New Man.

"I had begun to think my case was hopeless, as I had tried about every kind of medicine that I thought might help me, but nothing gave me any relief," was the statement of Mr. Charles Sweeney, 7109 Monticello Street, Pittsburgh, to the

MR. CHARLES SWEENEY

Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating the great natural medicine, Ten Herbs, to crowds of people. "Then I tried Ten Herbs, and it has given me such splendid results that I just cannot say enough for it," continued Mr. Sweeney, who has been a motorman for the Pittsburgh Street Railyway Co. for four years.

"I had shooting pains all over my body—from head to foot. For several years I had been afflicted with stomach, liver, kidney and bowel trouble. I was so nervous and exhausted that I did not know what a good night's sleep was. I had not eaten with any real desire for a long time. When I did eat, I would feel miserable, because of sour stomach, gas and stabbing pains. These pains would center in my right side and shoot around my shoulder blades. My bowels would not move without using a physic, and my liver was sluggish, causing headaches and dizzy spells. I was so badly rundown that I had no ambition to do anything.

"The statements, in the daily papers, of local people who had been helped by Ten Herbs, induced me to try your medicine. Now I can honestly say that five bottles have made a new man of me. I can eat with pleasure, and do not suffer with that awful indigestion. There are no more pains or gas. My nerves are getting in good condition, and I sleep soundly. My bowels have become regular, and my liver and kidneys are working normally. Headaches and dizzy spells have disappeared. I have more pep, vigor and energy, and my work seems light and my spirits brighter. Ten Herbs has been such a boon for me, and will be for others, that I am glad to endorse it."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine. Free sample given.

SPORT COMMENT

against the second division members. Pittsburgh has played 14 games more against the first division teams than the next ranking club, Brooklyn, and 14 fewer against the second division members than the next lowest club, Philadelphia.

THE following table, complete up-to-date, shows the number of games played by each club against first division and second division opposition:

	Games played against first division clubs.	Games played against 2nd. division club.	Yet to play against first division clubs.	Yet to play against 2nd. division clubs.
Pittsburgh	57	19	31	47
Brooklyn	43	34	45	32
St. Louis	42	38	24	50
Cincinnati	39	42	27	46
Boston	38	36	50	30
Philadelphia	38	33	50	33
Chicago	37	45	29	43
New York	22	51	46	37

BUT there's a silver lining to it all, for inasmuch as the schedule operated against the Rovers and favored their rivals in the first half of the season, which the Buccaneers complete today, it naturally follows that from now on conditions will be reversed. In other words, the Pirates will have fewer hard games and more of the so-called easier games to play than the clubs that are now ahead of them.

John Miljus

That schedule has been a big factor in holding the Bucs back and helping their competitors. It was only yesterday, for instance, that the Giants were knocked out of second place. How far would they be below that position if the schedule had not made it possible for them to win 33 and lose only 18 against the second division clubs so far while winning only 9 and losing 12 against the first division.

THOUGH the fans of the Pittsburgh district regret the passing of Pitcher John Miljus, who, apart from his popularity as a native of Pittsburgh, won additional favor last fall by his part in helping the Bucs to win the pennant, it is generally admitted he was doing little for the Pirates this year and that it would have done little good to keep him longer.

"Miljus was let go simply because we felt that he could not win for us," said Manager Bush. This is borne out by the fact that Miljus had to be taken out of the box in nearly every start of late. He startd nine games all season and finished only two of them.

TWO more championship fistic battles are ready to be staged, if the weather does not interfere. In New York tonight, Tod Morgan will enter the ring in defense of the world's junior lightweight title against Eddie (Cannonball) Martin after three postponements, and later Corporal Izzy Schwartz will meet Challenger Frisco Grande, a Filipino, for the flyweight crown.

In a previous meeting Morgan got the decision over Martin, but the verdict was questioned by many. Morgan is first choice in the betting, but it is generally believed that Martin will give him a real fight.

Tod Morgan

THE Schwartz-Grande match furnishes something of a novelty with respect to ring championships, for the battle is being offered the public at a maximum admission charge of $3. This condition has no parallel in boxing history, and is regarded by many as the forerunner to a much desired general reduction in fistic prices.

THE release of John Miljus, following that of Earl Smith, cut the Pirate roster to a total of only 22 players, the smallest total in either of the big leagues. There are two catchers, nine pitchers, six infielders and five outfielders on the payroll, counting Scott as an outfielder, though he may be used as a catcher in emergencies until Claude Linton can be recalled.

GENERAL LIST IS STEADY

The securities list was quiet and noticeably steady on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, disregarding to a large extent the unsettlement on the New York market created by the raise in the Chicago Federal Reserve rediscount rate.

Direct influence of the New York reaction was noted in Westinghouse Air Brake which was off more than a point in the early market here. This stock enjoyed a sudden bulge yesterday which carried it to the highest level since before the June slump. The company has new orders in hand for railroad safety signal equipment but, while these actual contracts are comparatively small, the placing of the new business is interpreted in informed quarters as the first move in a general extension of the signal installation program now in progress throughout the country. Westinghouse Air Brake, through Union Switch and Signal, and the General Railway Signal Company, dominate the railway safety system field and once the installation program gets fully under way, it is likely these companies will be kept busy for several years in supplying the demand.

The market as a whole reflected the absence of buying interest which has characterized the dealings here since the general reaction began in New York several weeks ago. Neither on the brake nor on the recovery was the eastern movement influential in causing wide fluctuations here. A few of the high-priced semi-investment issues backed down a little, but the list as a whole held to a comparatively narrow range.

6% External Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

Dated June 1, 1928 Due June 1, 1968

Total authorized issue $42,000,000. Interest payable June 1 and December 1. Principal and interest payable at the New York office of White, Weld & Co., Fiscal Agent, in United States gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness, without deduction for any Brazilian national, state or local taxes, present or future. Coupon bonds of $1,000 and $500 denominations, registerable as to principal.

THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK, REGISTRAR

Cumulative Sinking Fund, calculated to retire entire issue by maturity, is to operate semi-annually by drawing Bonds for redemption at 100% on interest payment date, beginning on December 1, 1932. Redeemable also as a whole, at the option of the State, on any interest date at 100% upon thirty days' notice.

The following is summarized from information obtained partly by cable from Dr. Getulio Vargas, President of the State, and from other official or authoritative sources:

Rio Grande do Sul: The State of Rio Grande do Sul is the southernmost State of Brazil, adjoining Uruguay to the south and Argentina to the west. Its area of 91,310 square miles, equal to that of New York and Pennsylvania combined, consists mostly of land especially adapted to stock raising and agriculture. The State leads all other Brazilian states in cattle and sheep raising, is the only State in which wheat is grown on a commercial scale, and is one of the three leading states in Brazil in manufacturing and in the value of its imports and exports. Population, which is predominantly of European descent, is estimated at 2,358,000. Capital and principal city is Porto Alegre, which has a population of about 200,000.

Finances: Ordinary revenues of the State in each of the last twenty years have shown a surplus over ordinary expenditures, the annual surpluses having been devoted chiefly to improvements and extensions of State properties and productive enterprises operated by the State.

There is no record of default on any funded obligation, either internal or external, of the State of Rio Grande do Sul or of any municipality within the State.

Security: The Bonds of this Loan are the direct obligations of the State of Rio Grande do Sul, which covenants that this Loan shall have a prior lien on any of its revenues or income which may hereafter be pledged to secure any future loan, unless this Loan shall at that time have been secured by a first lien on specific revenues acceptable to the Fiscal Agent sufficient to cover not less than one and one-half times the maximum interest and sinking fund requirements of this Loan. The State covenants not to make any further issue of bonds, internal or external, while Bonds of this Loan are outstanding, if as a result of such issue the total annual debt service of the State would exceed 30% of the annual average total revenues of the State during the preceding three years; this limitation, however, is not to apply to future debt contracted to provide for enterprises owned or aided by the State so far as the service thereof is paid from revenues of such enterprises.

Purpose of Issue: The Laws authorizing this Loan provide that the proceeds thereof shall be applied to the refunding of internal and external debt, subscription to the capital of the Rural Credit & Mortgage Bank, and to specific municipal improvements.

All conversions of Brazilian milreis into United States dollars have been made at the rate of 12 cents to the milreis, approximately the current rate of exchange.

Application will be made to list these Bonds on the New York Stock Exchange

Bonds are offered when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to the approval of our counsel, Messrs. Curtis, Mallet-Prevost, Colt & Mosle, of New York. It is expected that delivery of temporary bonds will be made on or about July 26, 1928.

Member of 'Big Ten' Group Tells of Their Expectations

By B. C. FORBES

EVERYONE owning stocks will be interested in this. It comes from one of the "Big Ten," as the most powerful group of bull operators has been called.

It reveals clearly and forcefully that these wealthy operators are today more bullish than they were before the break came—if that could be possible.

THE statements have been inspired by the fact that my own attitude toward speculation has not been ultra-optimistic, to say the least.

"I cannot see why you are not bullish," says this member of the "Big Ten," "because the outlook is very bright; as a matter of fact, this is the first time in a long time that the haze has been lifted and we have clear atmosphere."

Please understand that the following statements represent his attitude and expectations, not mine. Some of the quotations he sees coming for this, that and the next stock strike me as over-enthusiastic.

However, coming from the source they do, these observations will have widespread interest.

"General Motors easily is good for 40 points from 180; Radio you will see sell at $300; in fact, with the coming presidential election you will witness a real boom in the stock market. You will see all the good stocks making new highs.

"All of the good news as far as stocks are concerned is yet to come. Most of this good news will be given out during July and August. This will make a good market. What I mean by good news: For instance, the other day Anaconda Copper was put on 4 per cent basis; Montgomery-Ward will have a stock dividend, which makes this stock good for 15 or 20 points; and Hupmobile, in addition to the regular cash dividend, will pay an extra cash dividend and a small stock dividend.

"Cast Iron Pipe will be split up and the dividend increased, which will make the split-up of the stock equivalent to $350 to $400 per share, whereas it has been selling around $250 per share.

"General Motors likewise will have a split-up in August.

"Richfield Oil, one of the biggest producers and distributors in California, has a wonderful future. It is good for 65 soon.

"It wouldn't be surprising if the Giannini stocks had a very substantial recovery from their recent low levels. It is understood that a number of wealthy men have been buying these stocks instead of the poor little fellows who owned so much of the stock before the collapse came.

"YOU gave in your column a 'tip' on the stock market, which was to look at the management and board of directors of a company before buying its shares.

"Well, take a look at Radio Corporation of America — the marvelous possibilities of this company; the amalgamations bound to take place; the radio business with Europe. It would not be at all amazing if this stock, within a period of five years, sells above $500. This is not a stock to buy on margin. But it is one that would pay to buy outright and put away.

"THERE can be no doubt as to Hoover's election. I personally feel, and think you do likewise, that he was always a favorite of Wall Street, and I am sure Mellon would not have delivered him the votes he did if he was not a Wall Street choice.

"GENERAL business for the last six months of this year will undoubtedly exceed the first six months. Money will be very cheap—a great deal cheaper than it was the first six months.

"FRANCE has gone on a gold basis and certainly conditions in Europe are better now than at any period since the war. Mr. Durant on his recent trip found that nearly everyone is playing the market over there just the same as they are here, which of course shows they are prospering. The only danger to the United States seemed to be the fact that we are prospering when the rest of the world was suffering. I cannot help but see a bright future with the whole world prospering."

LET me repeat that the opinions and the quotations here given are not mine but come direct from the "inside" of the powerful group that has led the Bull market. Use your own judgment—not his or mine.

MARKET REACTS AS MONEY RATE STIFFENS

NEW YORK, July 11.—(AP.)—Stiffening money rates brought about another sharp reaction in the stock market today. An opening decline of 1 to 7½ points was followed by a rally when the call money renewal rate was unchanged at 6 per cent. The subsequent calling of $20,000,000 in bank loans, accompanied by a tightening of time money and bankers' acceptances, brought about another sinking spell after midday.

Heavy liquidation of stocks took place on the theory that other federal reserve centers will follow the lead of Chicago in marking up the rediscount rates to 5 per cent, and that there is little hope of easy money before fall, if then. The day's trade news was largely favorable. Weekly steel trade reviews emphasized the fact that the seasonal decline in output had been smaller than usual, production last month being the largest for any June in the last 10 years.

Call money advanced to 7 per cent after midday.

High-priced specialties were the hardest hit by the selling movement. Case Threshing, which has been inactive all week, sold nearly 18 points below the previous sale. Wright Aeronautical broke 9 points, American Machine and Foundry 8½, Du-Pont 7½, Radio and Johns-Manville 6½ each and Greene Cananea Copper, General Motors, Curtiss, General Electric and Montgomery-Ward sold down 4 to 6 points.

There were a few exceptions to the downward trend, Kennecott Copper standing out with a 2-point gain, while Chicasha Cotton Oil moved into new high ground. New low prices for the year, or longer, were recorded by American Woolen, common and preferred, Pan-American Western and Western Union.

Rails yielded with the industrials. Texas and Pacific, Wabash, New York Central and Chesapeake and Ohio sold 3 to 5 points lower.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rate Raise Tests Market.

The market reeled under the impact of the Chicago Federal Reserve rediscount rate raise, but after a sharp early dip the list displayed noticeable resistance to the down trend. It was apparent that the buying power created by the distribution of the enormous July 1 interest and dividends was making itself felt and that there were takers for practically all of the good stocks on the recessions. Around mid-day the market was subjected to another test when the call money rate was advanced to 6½ per cent as against the opening at 6. This condition was no surprise to the street, which had been informed of the tightening credit situation yesterday. The general expectation was for a further rise in the call rates. No pronounced relief in the money market appears likely in the immediate future as the season's big grain crop is moving to the terminals and this movement will tie up a considerable volume of the available credit for some time. However, students of the money market point out that there is plenty of credit available for all purposes, but that its cost is higher, mainly due to the outward movement of gold the past several months and the fact that the securities markets have absorbed what many people regard as a too high percentage of whole.

In the late market call money moved up to 7 per cent and the speculative specialties broke badly in consequence. Some of the standard industrials also lost considerable ground under the influence of further strong pressure on Steel common.

Chicago Bank Rate Raised.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago has advanced its rediscount rate to 5 per cent, from 4½ per cent, the latter rate having been raised from 4 per cent April 20. The increase gives that center the highest bank rate of the system, all others being at 4½ per cent. Action of Chicago in raising the rate is attributed in New York bank banking circles to the large amount of credit apparently tied up in that center in speculative loans. In the judgment of federal reserve directors these loans have not been liquidated to the same relative extent they were liquidated here in June following the general raising of rediscount rates to 4½ percent. There is an unusual amount of credit outstanding by the Chicago member banks. On July 3 this amounted to $2,060,116,000, against record figures the week before of $2,067,229,000. Of the latter amount $808,567,000 comprised loans on stocks and bonds and only $738,882,000 commercial loans.

New York Raise Doubtful.

In the opinion of New York bankers the action of Chicago in raising its rate at this time does not necessarily imply similar action at the eastern center. It is believed to be designed to correct a purely local condition. At the same time the increase of brokers' loans at New York last week, after a three-week contraction, is considered important in this respect. It is thought the federal reserve authorities are determined to bring about sufficient adjustment of security loans throughout the system so as not to complicate the fall commercial demands for money.

The Battle of Prices.

There is evidence that two opposing forces are operating to affect the market. On the one side are some of the important groups which were active in stocks earlier in the year and which are still working, probably to liquidate part of their holdings at favorable levels. On the other hand the conservative bankers and Federal Reserve authorities seem to desire a corrective action, so loans can be reduced and the credit situation improved. It has been the experience in the past that speculative interests have held the upper hand in such a situation for a time, but eventually the wishes of the bankers have been realized because they had the fundamentals on their side.

Bond Market Softens.

The increase in the Chicago Federal Reserve rate was reflected by increased liquidation in the bond market. Offerings were on a larger scale and were generally made at concessions, which amounted to small fractions in the majority of investment issues, but were more keenly felt in semi-speculative rails and convertible liens. Liberty bonds continued to show a soft tone, but the Treasury issues were more steady than at any time during the past week. The brunt of the selling was felt in the more active convertible liens and in second-grade railroad issues.

Gulf States Beats 1927.

Gulf States Steel Company reports for June quarter, net income of $203,953, equal, after preferred dividends, to $1.35 a share on 125,000 common shares, against $337,849 or $2.42 a share in the preceding quarter, and $134,130 or 79 cents a share in the June, 1927, quarter. Six months profits was $541,802, or $3.77 a share on the common, against $371,225 or $2.41 a share last year.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

CONTINUING our discussion of the annual reports of corporations we turn to the liability side of the balance sheet. The liabilities may be said to consist of three parts, funded, current and capital. Under the heading of liabilities are summarized all the debts of the company.

THE funded debts are bonds, debentures and long term notes outstanding, which mature at some distant date, which must be paid serially or which must be retired by the setting aside of annual sinking funds. The money required to retire serial bonds and to meet sinking fund requirements is not deducted on the income account, but it must always be considered as a factor in a corporation's ability to pay dividends.

A company may show good earnings, but may not be in a position to pass them on to stockholders because of the necessity of meeting charges of this kind. Interest requirements on the funded debt are, of course, deducted from the income account.

THE current liabilities consist of accounts due to firms selling materials and supplies to the corporation, money borrowed from banks, accumulated but unpaid interest and reserves for paying Federal and local taxes.

It is customary also to include funded debt maturing within one year as a current liability since this will reduce cash on hand, unless new issues of bonds or notes are sold to refund the old obligations. Many companies do not do this, however, so that it is advisable to check up on the maturities of funded debt in analyzing a balance sheet.

THE term "working capital" is often used in discussing the financial position of a company. This will not be found on the balance sheet. It is the difference between the current assets and the current liabilities. It represents the margin of cash and receivables over current debts which the company has on which to transact its business.

The ratio of current assets to current liabilities is also frequently mentioned. This is obtained by dividing the current assets by the current liabilities. As a general rule a company with a current ratio of 3 is considered in a good position, although this varies with different industries. A firm operating theaters or a public utility has practically no inventories so that it can safely work on a smaller ratio than a department store.

IN COMPARING current assets and current liabilities there are several things which should be watched. A company which has most of its current assets tied up in inventories and accounts receivable and which has practically no cash is not in a sound position even though it shows a good ratio. The size of notes payable to banks and accounts payable in proportion to the current asset items afford a fairly accurate barometer of a company's financial condition.

ALTHOUGH stock outstanding does not constitute a debt in the ordinary sense; it is a liability of the company and it constitutes the third class which we have mentioned. Stocks are listed at their par values except in the case of no par stocks, which are listed at some arbitrary figure.

If the company has cumulative preferred stock outstanding it is important to notice if all of the back dividends have been paid since dividends on the common stock are usually forbidden until such arrears are met.

IF THE total of all these classes of liabilities is deducted from the total assets the result will be the surplus.

This surplus represents the equity in the corporation which has been accumulated for the stockholders. It may be rightly considered a form of indebtedness of the company to its common stockholders and for this reason it is also listed among the liabilities.

Obviously the inclusion of surplus among the liabilities will make the total of all liabilities, as shown on the balance sheet, check with the total assets.

IT CAN readily be seen that the book value of the common stock of a company is the amount left after the deduction of all the other liabilities from the assets. This would be the par or stated value of the common stock added to the surplus. In analyzing a statement, however, it is customary to deduct such intangible items as good will and deferred assets from the book value in order to get a figure representing only real property.

IF POSSIBLE it is exceptionally valuable to to make comparisons with previous years in judging a company's position. In this way only is it possible to determine whether the organization is growing, standing still or on the decline.

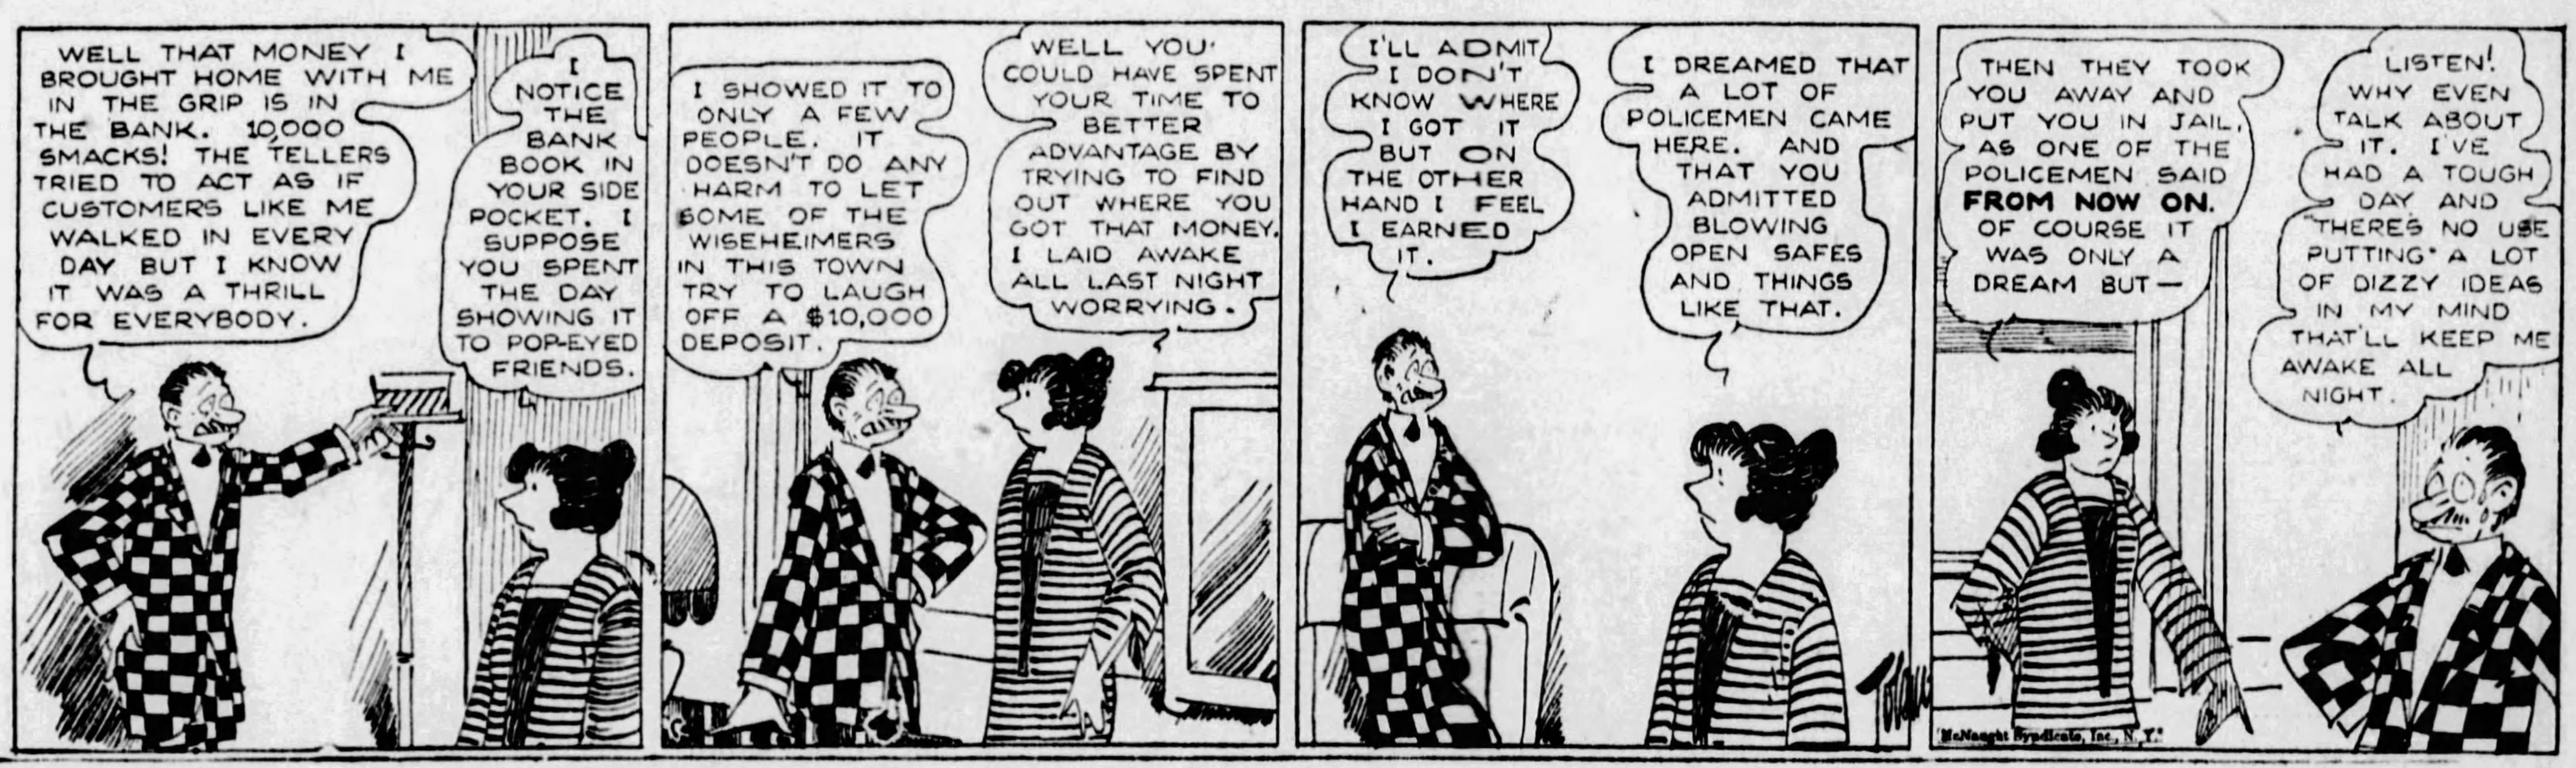
THE BUNGLE FAMILY Nerves



WELL THAT MONEY I BROUGHT HOME WITH ME IN THE GRIP IS IN THE BANK. 10,000 SMACKS! THE TELLERS TRIED TO ACT AS IF CUSTOMERS LIKE ME WALKED IN EVERY DAY BUT I KNOW IT WAS A THRILL FOR EVERYBODY.
I NOTICE THE BANK BOOK IN YOUR SIDE POCKET. I SUPPOSE YOU SPENT THE DAY SHOWING IT TO POP-EYED FRIENDS.
I SHOWED IT TO ONLY A FEW PEOPLE. IT DOESN'T DO ANY HARM TO LET SOME OF THE WISEHEIMERS IN THIS TOWN TRY TO LAUGH OFF A $10,000 DEPOSIT.
WELL YOU COULD HAVE SPENT YOUR TIME TO BETTER ADVANTAGE BY TRYING TO FIND OUT WHERE YOU GOT THAT MONEY. I LAID AWAKE ALL LAST NIGHT WORRYING.
I'LL ADMIT I DON'T KNOW WHERE I GOT IT BUT ON THE OTHER HAND I FEEL I EARNED IT.
I DREAMED THAT A LOT OF POLICEMEN CAME HERE. AND THAT YOU ADMITTED BLOWING OPEN SAFES AND THINGS LIKE THAT.
THEN THEY TOOK YOU AWAY AND PUT YOU IN JAIL, AS ONE OF THE POLICEMEN SAID FROM NOW ON. OF COURSE IT WAS ONLY A DREAM BUT—
LISTEN! WHY EVEN TALK ABOUT IT. I'VE HAD A TOUGH DAY AND THERE'S NO USE PUTTING A LOT OF DIZZY IDEAS IN MY MIND THAT'LL KEEP ME AWAKE ALL NIGHT.

COOK-COOS

Illinois Master Barbers have passed a resolution declaring it undignified to accept a tip.

The last thing a Chicago barber wants to conserve is his dignity.

That resolution has the sincere ring of a political party platform.

Don't be surprised if the florists pass a resolution against Mothers' Day.

It should read: "We don't like to be put in the position of saying, 'Give us $5 or you don't like your mother.'"

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Sir or Madame—

Recently I received a letter saying that a pint of Canadian rye was being sent to me C. O. D. through the mails. When the package came I gave the postman $2.25. Contemplate my chagrin on opening the package, to find a pint bottle full of Canadian rye.

Caspar Doakes.

News item—

"Only three Indian tribes in Brazil know the lost art of how to shrink heads."

A lot of young men's fathers in this country would give anything to learn the secret.

And then there's the Flett Tire Company.

Whose goose I'd cook it,

With a "Look it—"

What's Wrong With This?

SYNOPSIS. — Gent, twirling moustache in hotel lobby notes personal item asking bozo who picked up lady's glove at Dragoon ball to be in Zoological Garden Sunday.

LET us guess the age of the gentleman, and if we guess his age to be between twenty and thirty we will not be mistaken; and if we should lay a wager that he was the Hon. Harry Doncaster, brother to Lord St. Leger, and a captain of the Light Dragoons, on leave from India, we would win our wager beyond all chance of dispute, although—

(Bayonne Times)

"William Gurk was bitten on the left leg by a dog that leaped from a city park truck yesterday. Gurk had the wound cauterized and notified the police, who informed the park superintendent to have the owner of the dog tied up for observation."

Armed Crews for Patrol Needed in Daytime, Too

To 14 police precincts have been assigned armed motorcycle crews for night patrol duty, two men in each crew, a driver and a policeman seated in a sidecar, armed with a riot gun. They will ride through the streets of their precincts while another crew remains on duty at the precinct station awaiting emergency calls.

This is an innovation designed to prevent many crimes. Its value in that direction perhaps will be greater than in the apprehension of those who have committed crimes. Fear of capture is a great deterrent to wrongdoing. The knowledge that a policeman may arrive any moment frequently has frightened persons away from the scene of a contemplated burglary or holdup. With wings added to his heels the officer of the law becomes a greater terror to the evildoer. He knows not when the policeman will come, but does know that he will come swiftly.

It is necessary to take extraordinary precautions these days to keep ahead of the criminal. He can steal an automobile, pounce upon some messenger whose habits he has observed and quickly get away with a payroll or bank deposit. The new police move is to be commended, but there should be similar crews for day patrol as well as night. The "big money" holdups occur for the most part in the daytime.

You Can't Make Him Mad

Come What May, Al Smith Will Smile Through the Longest Day.

THE AL SMITH SMILE, AS SHOWN BY THE MOVIE CAMERA, ENDING IN A COMFORTABLE SMOKE.

Here is the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, Gov. Al Smith of New York. These "movies" show Democrats that they have a cheerful candidate. Serious when conditions are serious, and when he MUST be serious, the Governor prefers the smiling side of life. He likes to smile and likes to see other people smile.

Soon you will see Gov. Smith and Herbert Hoover on the screen in every moving picture house. Probably you will hear both of them talking over the radio and from the talking movie screen. And then you will see and hear the serious side.

Gov. Smith has made experiments with the talking movie in the studio of his friend, William Fox, and believes that "talking movies" are destined to play an important part in political work.

The moving pictures, and especially the TALKING moving pictures, show a man exactly as he is. And they enable a candidate to be seen and heard by every voter in the nation.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Milky Way

THE Milky Way shows the frame, or skeleton of the visible universe, often called the galactic system. This is the system to which our sun belongs, as a member of one of vast star-groups. But my present purpose is to point out the appearance of the Milky Way as anybody can see it with the naked eye, rather than to discuss its structure as revealed by astronomical studies.

July is a month most favorable for such observation. In the mid-summer evenings the great luminous arch spans the sky, rising far around in the northeast, where the constellation Perseus and the bright star Capella skim the horizon almost directly under the Pole star. (This is for latitude 40 or more.) At this point the Milky Way is a faint band, 10 degrees or more broad, but irregular, like puffs of rising smoke, stretching upward through the key-shaped constellation Cassiopeia, and becoming brighter as it leaves the horizon.

It passes to the eastward of the Pole star at a distance of about 30 degrees, and then, still brightening, it pours a phosphorescent flood over the large constellation Cygnus, whose characteristic figure is the Northern Cross, a long, shapely form, its main beam following the course of the Milky Way, while its cross-beam almost spans it from side to side. In the head of the Cross glows its chief star, Denib Cygni, while its foot is marked by Albireo, one of the most exquisitely beautiful colored doubles to be found in the heavens, and fortunately one which can be satisfactorily viewed with the smallest astronomical telescope.

Here in the constellation Cygnus the Milky Way curiously breaks up into more or less separated streams of varying degrees of brightness. Near the head of the Cross appears a dark space, sometimes called a "coal-sack." There are other longitudinal dark stretches in the luminous stream which give it a very singular aspect, like that of parallel clouds.

Opposite the foot of the Cross, high overhead, the galactic stream passes between the splendidly brilliant star Vega in the constellation Lyre, which lies on the northern side, and the less sparkling, but yet very conspicuous star Altair in the constellation Eagle, lying on the southern side. After passing Altair the glowing stream swerves westward toward the constellations Sagittarius and Scorpio, which form very striking figures (especially Scorpio, whose crooked starry outline befits its name). Between Altair and Sagittarius in the little constellation Scutum Sobieskii, the stars of the Milky Way, individually invisible, gather into clusters and corruscating masses which astonish the observer with their sparkling riches when looked at with a small telescope.

From this point down to the southern horizon the Milky Way breaks into glowing clouds that spread far to right and left, appearing so brilliant on a clear, moonless night (such as we shall have this year during the middle weeks of July), that they attract all eyes like the glow of a distant conflagration, and when observed with the most modest optical instrument fill the beholder with astonishment and delight.

It is interesting to know that the most recent researches indicate that the center of the galactic system is situated in the direction of that same star-crowded region, where layer beyond layer of "star-dust" seems to testify to the unparalleled magnificence and the vastness of concentrated energy in that distant heart of the universe which the Milky Way surrounds and encloses.

Supporting Europe

LAST year, says a Department of Commerce report, the government received from Europe, in payment of war debts, $200,000,000, all as interest. In the same period American tourists spent in Europe and other foreign countries $770,000,000, almost four times as much. American residents sent back to their relatives in Europe $206,000,000 more, almost exactly what the government was paid on debts.

Even in charity, we sent abroad $43,000,000—more than a fifth of what was paid in interest to the government by foreign governments.

Those figures are sufficient demonstration of the ability of Europe to pay us what it owes. If we forgave Europe her debts, and spent our own money at home, we should be better off financially, and Europe would be worse off than at present. And how Europe would howl!

Hobbies

NEARLY everyone has a certain individuality.

Why not increase your individuality by having a hobby?

There is nothing like a hobby to dissipate troublesome thoughts.

A pleasurable and useful occupation, seriously followed, is the best sort of remedy for the blues.

Self-expression is a safety valve.

Too much routine is not a good thing mentally or physically.

Routine kills initiative or creative thought.

And when we stifle constructive thought, even though it be merely improvement in routine, we have ceased to progress.

There cannot be growth and enlarged viewpoint if a daily program is all that is desired.

With some persons hobby comes before the daily and necessary labor.

When hobby is paramount, disaster is looming for business.

Diversion has its place, but it can be carried too far.

A routine job need not kill your individuality, however.

But don't allow your hobby to take the time and thought you should devote to the main job.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

The Plan

THERE is a matchless Plan; no man denies,
Whose mind is clear to see,
An ordered universe, although it lies
Thrice veiled in mystery.

Yet groping, seeking, searching, many go
Unsatisfied always,
Still clamoring for the answer none may know
Who tread this earthly maze.

Sometimes they see the honest fail, the good
Reel backward in defeat,
And virtue's self, in melancholy mood,
Before sin's ranks retreat.

But always doubt must falter and give place
Before the nobler dream,
While through all mystery and maze men trace
The Plan Supreme!

Isn't It So?

A well-digger says there is always room at the bottom.

The half is better than the whole—if you are the one who has to give up.

Go ahead when you think you are right, but don't expect the crowd to follow you.

The bark of the average dog is worse than his bite; the bark is usually kept up all night.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

THIS is just another slant on a story that you have heard lots of times. A guy went into an expensive restaurant in San Francisco and ordered two dozen oysters. He seemed to be awful hungry, and he ate them up without any bread or potatoes or anything to go with them. Then he ordered two dozen more, and ate them too. He was getting kinda blue under the eyes by that time, but he ordered one more dozen.

After he had ate the last oyster, this guy looked sick. When the waiter gave him a bill, he tore it up. The boss come around then.

"What's the matter, wasn't the oysters good?"

"No, they wasn't good!"

"But couldn't you of found it out before you ate five dozen of them? And besides, they are right fresh out of the water."

"Oh, they're fresh enough, all right. But I was broke when I come in, and I thought I'd keep on eating oysters till I found one with a pearl in it that would pay for my meal. Your oysters ain't got any pearls in them, that's what's the matter."

Strict Mother

LITTLE GIRL: "My mamma is awful strict. Is yours?"

Little Boy: "Orful!"

Little Girl: "But she lets you go anywhere you want to, and—"

Little Boy: "Oh, she ain't strict with me!"

Little Girl: "Then, who is she strict with?"

Little Boy: "Pa."

Those Bad Roads

ALABASTER and his wife were motoring in the country in their new car.

Towards evening Alabaster grew rather sentimental.

"Darling," he cried suddenly, "I have taken you over all the rough places in life like a good husband, haven't I?"

His wife glanced at him sharply. She was a very unromantic woman.

Baffled

THE great sleuth put away his magnifying-glass.

"The culprit has left a number of clues about," he declared, casting a quick, definite glance round the room, "and I'm certain the culprit has short black hair, is 5 feet 7 inches tall, smoked Lucky Day cigarets, wore woollen socks, and drove here in a motor car. Another thing—"

"But how marvellous!" interrupted the victim of the robbery. "Now, was the culprit a man or a woman?"

It was then that the great detective was baffled.

Her Mistake

ANGRY CUSTOMER (tossing a package on the counter): "Makes washing a pleasure, does it? Does the washing while you wait, does it? It's the little flakes of soap that—"

Grocer: "Madam, one moment, please. This is not soap."

Angry Customer: "Not soap? Not soap?"

"No. Your daughter asked for half-pound of grated cheese and a half-pound of soap flakes. This is the cheese."

"My stars! And last night I made a pudding—"

Hostages to Fortune

A CHICAGO father has his sick child taken to a hospital. The child is given good care and gets well enough to go home. The hospital seeks to retain the child until the hospital bill is paid. What do you think?

A hospital is as much a business institution as a department store or a factory. If its charges are not paid it cannot continue in business. Nevertheless, the idea of retaining a patient, and particularly a child patient, as security is one of the most singularly repellant ideas that we have seen advanced. It is reminiscent of peonage; it is a singularly advanced form of economic slavery.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 11.—Early Manhattan impressions: Andreas de Segurola's monocle, the first I ever saw. . . . The one-legged newsboy at the Seventy-second street subway. . . . The old Sans Souci where Mae Murray danced. . . . The caricatures on the walls at Joel's cafe. . . . The owls on the Herald building.

The Monday afternoon audience at Hammerstein's Victoria. . . . Lillian Lorraine in a rose swing on the New York Roof. . . . The luncheon crowd at the Knickerbocker. . . . Caruso with the tiny feather in his hat and cane held military fashion. . . . The newspaper crowd at the Marlborough bar, Big Tim and Little Tim Sullivan. . . . Chuck Connors, mayor of Chinatown, and his flat derby. . . . Nigger Mike Salter's, where Irving Berlin once sang. . . . Going to the Hadley Rescue Mission on the Bowery with a newspaper reporter who had been converted.

Interviewing Lew Fields and Joe Weber after their professional split. . . . Crying Mary, a beggar, who had control of her tear ducts. . . . The midnight crowd at Jack's. . . . And the sleeping cabbies outside. . . . Loafing with Louis Werba in the Knickerbocker Theater to hear Julia Sanderson sing "You Didn't Believe Me."

George Rector standing in the doorway of his father's cafe. . . . Herbert Corey's office in the Flatiron Building. . . . Bert Williams driving down Broadway in his red automobile. . . . The obelisk in Central Park by moonlight. . . . Francis Wilson in the revival of "Erminie."

The Bishop of Wall Street, who preached a noon-day sermon in Broad street. . . . Doc Perry's drug store in Park Row. . . . Chester Lord's desk in the editorial rooms of the New York Sun. . . . Roy Howard's cubbyhole office at the United Press. . . . The shoe shiners around Brooklyn Bridge.

Sitting across from Mayor Gaynor in the subway. . . . The Black Cat in the Village. . . . And Bobbie Edwards caroling his made-up songs. . . . The night boats to Albany. . . . Barnum's old home on St. Nicholas avenue. . . . The George M. Cohan table at the Claridge. . . . Francis White and William Rock at the Midnight Frolic. . . . And the glass runway overhead.

Broadway was furnished with a lukewarm thrill the other late afternoon. A phaeton drawn by a spanking bay trotted as briskly as traffic would permit southward driven by a smartly attired gentleman with an equally smartly dressed lady beside him. It has been quite a while since Broadway has seen an outfit of this sort. And likely it will turn out to be one of those press agent things.

* * *

Another thrill of the week concerned a young lady who sat in front of me at a theater. Her hair was bobbed and what is more there was a growing bald spot on the back of her head which she made no effort to hide. This feminine vanity stuff has been overdone anyway. Some women do not care.

* * *

Many of us are unable to visit a police station without feeling we may be taken for a missing murderer. I want to kick myself afterward for my disgusting servility. If I address an officer in a police station it is always after a few preliminary coughs as though I might disturb the great man in uniform when I am perfectly conscious that is exactly what he is paid for. The real truth is a uniform gives the average man a feeling of superiority and it somehow becomes contagious to the lowly worm who confronts him.

* * *

This, too, about New York policemen. Those in congested districts are invariably courteous and polite. But in outlying and lonely districts they become snippy. They want to show an authority not really theirs. Too few policemen realize they are public servants and nothing more, and I don't want to have to speak of this again.

* * *

And when you begin noticing how boyish policemen are you are about to become what is known in our set as a dodderer.

* * *

One of the aging dodderers of the Fifth Avenue clubs, by the way, was taking a midnight walk the other night. A strange cat was slinking along in his footsteps. "This cat," he complained to a policeman, "is following me around like I had him."

Best Conditions for Work

By DR. FRANK CRANE

I suppose every writing man or any successful man is constantly in receipt of letters asking him about his personal habits. The correspondents all want to know under what conditions he does his work best. They even inquire as to what he eats and what kind of clothes he wears.

One of these correspondents once wrote to Bill Nye, asking what clothes he wore and how he dressed. He answered, "In the morning I wear morning dress and in the evening I wear evening dress and at night a night dress."

About the best rule for doing your best work is to find those conditions that suit you best, wherein the brain functions most effectively. What these conditions are varies in the case of different people.

Elie Metchnikoff, the little Russian Jew who became one of the famous "microbe hunters" and discovered that in the human body are cells hostile to disease microbes, said he could always carry on his experiments best when pretty girls were close by. In your case, however, this kind of surroundings might have a disturbing effect.

Paul Ehrlich, another experimenter, used to have the grind-organ musicians play dance music outside of the laboratory. He said that his best ideas came when he heard gay music like that.

Dickens always had to have the same kind of slips of paper, blue ink and a quill pen when he wrote.

Stephen Foster, an American song writer, composed his melodies in a silent room with heavy carpets and draperies.

Newspaper men, used to the ceaseless noise of typewriters and the bustle of the copy room, sometimes find they cannot work so well where all is quiet.

Mark Twain used to write his best stuff lying in bed wearing an old-fashioned nightgown. Frank R. Stockton produced his famous "Rudder Grange," dictating it while he lay in a hammock and sipped lemonade.

Hazlitt, the essayist, spoke enthusiastically about the benefits of a brisk outdoor walk. Many other people cannot think while walking.

Schubert scratched off some of his best songs at odd moments. One of his famous pieces was jotted down on the back of the bill of fare of a beer garden as he waited for a friend.

So the best thing to do is not to try to imitate somebody else, but to find the time when your own thoughts flow with the greatest ease and then work hard.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

WHATEVER is beautiful soon becomes stylish. The girls at the bathing beaches, who found a pretty way to hold their hair in place, and tied bright colored, three cornered scarfs around their heads, letting the ends hang down their back, have started wearing them with sport dresses, and even on the street. The other night I saw a girl with a black lace one tied on her head at night.

The hair is pulled out in front of the ears, or maybe on the forehead, and the bright colored scarfs really take years off a lady's age.

A beautiful apartment house in Detroit went dry on hot water. No one could find what was the trouble. The boilers were hot, the furnaces roared, but still no hot water.

It was discovered that one of the tenants, Mrs. Gerald Johnstone, had a new parrot. The faucets in the maid's bathroom were running, and had been running for days.

After the maid was discharged, Mrs. Johnstone found in her room a book about superstitions. It said that no one should THINK of keeping a parrot if there was in their house any hot water in the pipe. They were sure to explode.

Speaking of maids: Winifred Van Duzer, who writes fiction and lives in Nyack, New York (outside of that she is a lovely girl), had distinguished guests for dinner. She didn't drink ice tea, but she gave it to her guests. They had said they liked it, but they didn't seem to be drinking any.

After the party she found the maid had poured cold buillion in their glasses, from the "ice tea pitcher" in the ice box. To this they had added sugar and lemon.

A girl in Evanston who wanted to make a great impression on her new in-laws invited them to dinner, after she had hired her first maid. After the meat course the maid stuck her head in through the kitchen door and yelled: "Are you through?"

Quietly, the embarrassed bride said: "Yes."

"All right," said the girl, propping open the swinging kitchen door, "stack up!"

A Chicago woman sues for divorce, and says her husband got an airplane so he could flirt to better advantage. Nice girls who wouldn't think of going automobiling with a stranger, would think it was fine to accept a ride in a plane. The wife explained that he takes advantage of these rides to promote his affairs of the heart.

But what would an airplane driver do, when an auto driver might have parked his car?

If anybody knows, please tell the girls!
